Party Lines Snarled

Further slight modification of the aid-Britain bill was discussed last night by Administration leaders after a fervent House appeal for national unity by Representative James W. Wadsworth, of New York.

Wadsworth, one of three Republicans who took the floor for the bill, declared unqualifiedly for the "all out" aid measure, but proposed two more changes to consolidate support.

Influential House Democrats later disclosed that one further amendment may be accepted to the bill—a limitation on the life of contracts made by the President prior to expiration of the act.

The bill now places no restriction on the authority of the President to carry out agreements entered before July 1, 1943, though it limits the life of the law to that date.

Majority members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee were considering this one further limitation—a fifth amendment to the bill. It may be sponsored by a member of the House leadership organization.

"If we could do two or three things to this bill," Wadsworth told the House, "it might bring about some greater degree of unity on the part of Congress and the people of the United States.

London (Wednesday), Feb. 5.—Wendell L. Willkie left London early today for "somewhere in England" to take a plane for Lisbon later this morning.

"Keep smiling, boys," was his parting call to several members of the American Eagle Squadron—United States volunteers in the R. A. F.—who escorted him to his train.

His departure followed a busy day in which Willkie discussed the possibilities of an invasion of Eire with Prime Minister De Valera in Dublin, had tea with King George and Queen Elizabeth in Buckingham Palace, then commented:

"I got the information I wanted." With a full picture of the war situation in both Eire and Britain,

British Misled Morgenthau, Wood Asserts

Witness Tells Senate Hearing He Doubts Figures on Assets

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Gen. Robert E. Wood, head of the "America First Committee," charged yesterday that the British had "misinformed" Secretary Morgenthau on the extent of their dollar assets in the United States, but he admitted that "I can't prove it."

Repeatedly he told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the Treasury figures showing the British to have virtually exhausted their resources in this country were, in his eyes, inaccurate.

Gen. Wood, who is chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., enumerated several British corporations and real estate holdings which "evidently did not appear in Secretary Morgenthau's figures." Then, when informed by a friendly Senator that the Secretary had actually given a sum total of $900,000,000 for this type of asset, Wood said, "I think it's too low, but I couldn't prove it."

Gen. Wood, who testified against the Administration's aid-to-Britain bill for three and a half hours, specifically mentioned Lever Bros., the American Viscose Corporation, the Dunlop Tire Co., British insurance companies, cotton plantations,

Lend-Lease Bill For Canada Under Study

Competition With U. S. For British Orders Weighed by Cabinet

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

The Canadian cabinet now has under discussion a lend-lease plan for Canadian aid to Britain, similar to the measure now before Congress, diplomatic sources disclosed yesterday.

The reason, it was said reliably, is a simple one: competition.

Though Canadian factories are now choked with orders from Great Britain, and though Britain appears to have enough Canadian dollar resources to keep on making payment to the Dominion for about a year, top Canadian officials, it was said, foresee a day coming within 12 months when Britain will prefer to take goods from the United States on lend-lease terms, which would not require cash, than on the present cash and short-term credit basis from Canada.

Consequently, it is learned, the Canadian cabinet in its recent meetings has been considering whether to present to the Canadian Parliament legislation like that now pending in the American Congress, legislation that would enable Canada to keep on supplying Britain with war goods without demanding

6 Rescued, Dozen Routed From Beds In 18th Street Fire

Six persons were rescued and a dozen others were routed from their beds early this morning when fire broke out in a three-story brick building at 809 Eighteenth Street Northwest.

An unidentified woman was overcome by smoke, given inhalator treatment and taken to Emergency Hospital in serious condition.

Among the rescued were Vernon Lee, jr., 3; his sister, Veenice, 1½, and brother, Loy, 2 weeks old. They were taken to Children's Hospital.

Archie L. Pruitt, a third-floor resident, helped his brother, Wallace, down to a tree, and himself slipped to safety via a rainpipe. John O. Kershner, another third-floor occupant, jumped to the street but escaped unhurt.

Spiritual Mobilization

Pupils Swamp Mission Speaker With Questions on Religion

By Robert Tate Allan
The Post's Church Editor

The National Christian Mission's religious-reawakening note yesterday found a warm response in the hearts of youth, as speakers visited local and nearby schools for the first time.

Meanwhile, other members of the evangelistic team continued their drive to spiritually mobilize citizens, again going into seminars, clubs, mass meetings and other programs. There were 1,300 who heard Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt speak at Calvary Baptist Church.

Dr. Roy A. Burkhart, outspoken Columbus (Ohio) pastor, got swamped by quizzical students at Rockville High School after his address, in which he pictured a revived youthful interest in religion.

They asked him why churches are dead, how to be sure there is a God, how to get dates, how to make parents behave, if there is any hope for the future, and other questions.

He contended that the churches are dead "because the preachers are dead, are selfish, independent and unwilling to cooperate. They are preaching a horse-and-buggy style of religion in a day of automobiles and airplanes."

Recalling that a group of Rockville students intoned the Lord's Prayer as a special feature of the service, Dr. Burkhart later told The Post that he thought Maryland "has the finest type of worship assembly in its schools that I've ever seen."

More than 250 students of the Medical Trust Trial Opens Here Today

20 Distinguished Physicians, Four Associations Accused Of Persecuting GHA

A trial whose outcome, regardless of the verdict, will exert great influence on the practice of medicine in this country opens this morning in District Court when 20 distinguished physicians go before the bar on charges of violating the Sherman antitrust law.

Cited along with the American Medical Association, District Medical Society and two other professional groups for alleged coercion of Group Health Association, Federal workers' medical cooperative, the 20 doctors will be defended by a formidable array of counsel.

The defendants' legal staff comprises Seth Richardson, William E. Leahy and Charles S. Baker, all of Washington, and Edward N. Burke, of Chicago.

On the other side, working under direction of Thurman Arnold, head of the Department of Justice trust division, will be John Henry Lewin and Grant W. Kelleher, special assistants to the Attorney General.

Prosecuted Madison Oil Case

The trial is scheduled to get under way at 10 a. m. with the selection of a 14-person jury, including two alternates. Justice James M. Proctor will be the presiding judge.

Opening statements will be delivered by Lewin and Kelleher for the prosecution. The defense may choose to follow with its own statement or reserve such action until opening its case for the presentation of evidence.

Kelleher and Lewin are the same team that prosecuted the Madison oil case for the Government three years ago, obtaining convictions of more than 20 oil companies, convictions which were sustained last year by the Supreme Court.

Fifteen of the 20 individual defendants are Washington physicians, including Dr. Thomas E. Neill, who was president of the District Medical Society at the time of the alleged "persecution" of Group Health Association, and Dr. Coursen B. Conklin, secretary-treasurer.

When the indictment was returned in December, 1938, there were 21 defendants. Dr. Thomas Groover, Washington radiologist, died several months ago.

Fishbein Among Defendants

The five non-Washington physicians, all officers of the American Medical Association with headquarters in Chicago, are:

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the A. M. A. Journal;; Dr. Olin West, secretary and general manager of the association; Dr. William C. Woodward, director of the A. M. A. bureau of legal medicine and legislation (he has since retired); Dr. William Dick Cutter, secretary of the A. M. A. council on medical education and hospitals, and Dr. Roscoe Genung Leland, director of the bureau of medical economics of the association.

Besides the A. M. A. and the District Medical Society, the professional organizations also on trial are the Washington Academy of Surgery and the Harris County (Tex.) Medical Society.

Petain Rejects Nazi Demands, Blocks Laval's Return, Crisis Grows; British Take Cirene

Former Graziani Base, 40 Miles West Of Derna, Falls to Anzac Motor Army

International News Service Staff Writer

Cairo, Feb. 4.—Australian and British forces, completing another spurt in their swift advance across the Libyan coast, tonight captured and immediately thrust beyond Cirene, 40 miles west of Derna, the Middle Eastern command announced.

This speedy advance against negligible opposition put the British-Anzac mechanized army within 125 miles of Bengasi, main Italian base in Libya, and gave them possession of Marshal Graziani's former base headquarters at Cirene.

Progress Rapid in East

At the same time, in a dramatic race to complete the conquest of Italian East Africa before the spring rains set in, British imperial troops have streaked 60 miles into Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland, it was announced.

Official quarters in Cairo announced that, aided by the R. A. F., the British-Australian army of North Libya was rolling westward at the rate of several miles a day.

Making almost as rapid progress in Eritrea, it was learned, Indian and British troops are approaching Kern, 40 miles beyond Agordat, and only 60 miles from Asmara, capital and key transportation center of Eritrea.

In northwestern Abyssinia, north of Lake Tana, the British forces are striking in the Chelga area toward Gondar, about 30 miles east of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan front.

Fascists Prepare to Resist

(Rome announced that Fascist troops have taken up strong positions east of Agordat and Barentu in Eritrea—both of which were taken by the British in the last few days, with many thousand Italians captured or slain. Apparently the Italians plan to make a strong stand in the Keren area, covering Asmara and Massaua, chief Eritrean port of the Red Sea.)

On the southern Ethiopian and southwestern Somaliland fronts, according to official advices from Nairobi in Kenya colony:

Torpedo Boats Raid Convoy, Italians Say

Rome, Feb. 4 (AP).—Seven hits on a strongly escorted British convoy in the Red Sea by a squadron of Italian torpedo boats were reported today by the high command.

The small speedy craft launched nine torpedoes in all last night, a communique declared. British destroyers and cruisers opened fire, the announcement said, but the Italians got away unharmed and returned to their base.

Way to Get Recruits

Duce Ousts 42 Party Leaders In Rome as Purge Spreads

Dismissed Men Replaced With 'Old Guard' Fascisti; Further Shake-ups Are Expected

By Allen Raymond
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Rome, Feb. 4.—Forty-two Fascist leaders of Rome have been required to resign from their posts, and their places have been taken by 42 of the old guard party leaders who were stalwarts with Premier Mussolini in the days of street fights against the Communists before the March on Rome.

All the party leaders who resigned, it was announced today, immediately volunteered for active service with troops at the front, and their services were accepted.

Among the offices to change occupants were 13 posts in the federal directorate of Rome, 9 in the directorate of the Roman Fascio, and 11 places in what is called here the federal commission for discipline.

It was understood here tonight that the house cleaning was slated to be the forerunners of similar shake-ups in other cities. Today in the nation's crisis Premier Mussolini is rallying to the directorate of the party the leaders who were closest to him when he was fighting his way to dictatorship.

Of the new leaders Il Messagero said today:

"These new officials bear names well known to the Black Shirts and dear to every Fascist. They are all old-time Fascists belonging to the old guard, who always remain firm at their battle posts even in the most difficult hours and who are unchangeable in their fidelity to Il Duce."

Meanwhile, despite the blocking of many prices, food costs are rising. The ministry of agriculture and forestry announced today an immediate increase of three lira a kilo or 7½ cents a pound in the price of butter and lard.

Italians Set Tepeleni Afire, Plan to Retreat

Stronghold Guarding Valona Captured, Greeks Report

By A. E. Angelopoulos
International News Service Staff Writer

Athens, Feb. 4.—Great fires were reported raging tonight in the key Fascist stronghold of Tepeleni, possibly indicating, according to the Athens radio, that Italy's forces were preparing to evacuate the fortress which has stemmed the tide of Hellenic advances northward to the port of Valona.

The Athens radio said the Fascist forces possibly were destroying vast stores of materiel before retreating.

The Greek advance was reported continuing on all fronts.

An important coastal area beyond Khimara was reported captured in the day, as well as a high mountain pass which the Italians had transformed into a stronghold defending Valona.

In still another area of the front, reports reaching Athens said, Hellenic forces launched a surprise counterattack which netted them further important positions. Many prisoners and vast quantities of material were captured.

In Athens, newspapers published a rumor that Gen. Ugo Cavallero, chief of the Italian Albanian forces, had been relieved of his command by orders from Rome.

Military experts in Athens interpreted the unconfirmed rumor as indicating that Gen. Cavallero's great counter-offensive of the last fortnight had been crushed.

Reports from the Albanian frontier said two Italian transports were sunk Sunday by an unidentified submarine operating near the Yugoslavian island of Vis.

The bodies of at least 60 soldiers were washed ashore on a neighboring island and identified as belonging to the auxiliary Italian warship Armato.

Batista Exiles 4 as Leaders Of Revolt Plot

Deposed Army Chief And Ex-Police Head Take Plane to Miami

By Arthur F. Burrows
United Press Staff Writer

Havana, Feb. 4.—The arrest and subsequent exile to the United States of four deposed Cuban army, navy and police officials left President Fulgencio Batista firmly in command of his government today after nipping a revolt plot in which his life reportedly was threatened.

The officials and their families flew to Miami in a chartered Pan American Airways clipper. The officials were Col. Jose E. Pedraza, former chief of the army; Col. Bernardo Garcia, former chief of police; Capt. Owen Parr, Pedraza's aide, and Maj. Juan Serra, former assistant police chief.

Though the wife of Col. Angel A. Gonzalez, former chief of the navy, was reported to have left, it was not clear whether the government had permitted him to depart with the others.

In a series of lightning moves last night and early today Batista crushed the revolt movement and frustrated the reported plot on his life, in which his assassination was said to have been scheduled for midnight.

Batista's first move was to suspend constitutional guarantees of civil liberties for 15 days and to place Pedraza and Gonzalez under arrest.

After receiving the plaudits of his cabinet for averting "an enormous disaster which threatened the fabric of the nation," Batista broadcast to the nation an outline of the plot.

The plot began with the moving Garcia as chief and his appointment of Benitez to replace Pedraza as head of the

Marshal Is Stubborn

By Ralph E. Heinzen

Vichy, Feb. 4.—Efforts to solve the 51-day-old crisis in French-German relations received a sharp setback tonight, after Admiral Darlan's return from Paris, when Marshal Petain balked at the "pretentious" demands of Pierre Laval and his Nazi supporters.

Darlan's efforts in Paris to overcome the deadlock, even at the price of restoring Laval to a post of great authority in the Vichy regime, were understood to have failed largely owing to "military and strategic exigencies."

(This appeared to indicate that Adolf Hitler, in addition to demanding the restoration to power of Laval, who was ousted by Petain as vice premier on December 14, might have demanded use of the French fleet and perhaps Bizerte and other French naval bases.)

Petain has a tremendous trump card to play—the virtually intact French fleet of 100 or more warships—if the new deadlock cannot be broken and the Laval-Nazi demands are not tempered.

The 84-year-old Petain, despite his desire for equitable "collaboration" with Germany, has stubbornly resisted every effort to touch this immobilized fleet or France's overseas empire.

The deadlock was revealed after a 90-minute emergency session of Petain's closest advisers immediately after Darlan's return from

Faced With Deportation

Gallant Scot, 9, Wins Heart Of Uncle Sam, Arlington Haven

Michael Storrie, a gallant 9-year-old Scotsman, who faced down a deportation order with the same courage that carried him alone through five months of bombing in London, was en route to Arlington, Va., last night—the length of his visit in the hands of the Attorney General.

Until the Justice Department decides whether he can stay in this country, Michael will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George C. McIntosh, of 4431 Nineteenth Street North, Arlington, Va. Both Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh are in the real estate business in Arlington.

Michael, who went through London's air raids without his mother or father to help him keep his chin up, and who arrived alone in New York, Monday, stood dry-eyed yesterday before a special board of inquiry at Ellis Island and heard himself ordered to be excluded from the country for lack of proper entry papers.

His unblinking acceptance of the blow moved the board to arrange an appeal and an immediate parole, the New York Times reported.

Michael, whose father is in Lisbon on a war mission and whose mother is doing war work in Bermuda, came to the United States in the American Export Liner Exeter from Lisbon after flying from England to Portugal.

He was to have been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh for the duration of the war, but his father or family friends in England neglected to supply him with the necessary card of identification and American visa.

"I did not know about such things," he said calmly to the board.

The board's order of deportation was mandatory and the procedure a routine one, but in Michael's case the members could not regard it in a routine way. Touched by sight of the sturdy little figure and his courage, they adjourned for a conference from which they presently emerged beaming. They had arranged, they told him, for an appeal to the Attorney General and in the meantime would let him go on to Virginia.

Mrs. McIntosh heard of him through the Soroptimist Club, of which both she and Michael's mother were members, and it was arranged for Michael to come to the United States.

Europe's Faith Being Tested, Forum Told

"In Europe in this time of suffering, we are confronted with a deepening spiritual life such as we have never seen before," Dr. Adolf Keller, of Geneva, Switzerland, told 150 at the Women's Christian Life Forum yesterday at the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

"But faith is being greatly tested," he said. "How would you feel if you would pray, day after day, 'give us this day our daily bread,' and you would see the faces of your children becoming thinner and paler? But the faith of many people is standing even this test."

This forum was one of six held in as many churches yesterday in connection with the National Christian Mission.

Dr. Keller quoted the president of the French Church Federation as saying that "we are at the bottom of the abyss." He told of the disorganization which has overtaken churches in France, with many pastors mobilized and in prison camps in Germany, with whole congregations turned refugee.

In Germany, Dr. Keller said, "the churches are open, and wherever the gospel is preached, they are crowded. The pastors can preach the gospel as long as they do not mix politics or criticize the government or apply the gospel to public life."

"No woman can be called a true American patriot who is irreligious in a day when the destiny of our Nation hangs in the balance," Mrs. Hilda L. Ives, of Newton Center, Mass., a leader in the National Christian Mission, told the Business Women's Council of Covenant First Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon.

"Successful women in business and the professions, and women in industry who are earning a living wage have a peculiar responsibility of their own and must constitute a fearless protectorate over any underprivileged or exploited groups of women in our democracy," she said.

"They must challenge any injustice in labor conditions, any exploitations of youth, any dangerous working conditions that might strike at the health of women and so jeopardize also the health of the childhood of the Nation. Particularly must they stand by their sisters of the colored race against whom so many ugly discriminations exist."

First Lady Indicts Ancestor As 'Okie' Problem Co-Creator

CHRISTIAN MISSION HEARS FIRST LADY—Dr. Worth M. Tippy confers with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt before her address yesterday to the National Christian Mission meeting in Calvary Church

Before 1,300 persons yesterday Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt confessed to having an ancestor with the kind of social conscience that helped to create America's problem of the destitute migrant.

She said he was a "man named Livingston" and that she "didn't like him a bit."

She referred to the ancestor to illustrate a speech on the migrant problem before a seminar of the National Christian Mission in Calvary Baptist Church. The seminar was on "Christian Social Relations."

Advance announcement that Mrs. Roosevelt would speak drew the biggest attendance of the mission seminars so far. Every inch of pew space in the church was filled and several hundred persons found standing room at the back and along the galleries or sat on chairs in the aisles. A few sat in the choir box.

Colonial Landowner

Mrs. Roosevelt said Livingston was a Colonial landowner in Dutchess County, N.Y., and one of th e most powerful landlords in the country. He was a true "lord of the manor," she recalled, who did not live on his land but who tried to get from his tenant farmers as much as he had paid the British Crown for the property.

Livingston refused to sell his property, she related, so that migration was his tenants' only hope. The First Lady said her ancestors' land holdings were situated not far from her summer home.

She told the story, she explained, to demonstrate that some of the forces that drove Oklahoma farmers into California were present at the very beginning of the Nation, 200 years before John Steinbeck wrote "Grapes of Wrath."

"It's the old story come back," she said, "a story we've never really settled or faced."

Calls Need a Defense Problem

Mrs. Roosevelt called the problem of need in the Nation a defense problem not only because of the effect of need on the physical condition of the country's defenders, but also because destitution tends to breed doubts about the desirability of the American form of government.

Indicating a photograph of a migrant mother and her children, she said: "You wouldn't blame her if she wondered if another form of government might be better . . . That is at the bottom of defense just as much as anything else."

Mrs. Roosevelt disclosed that she has conferred with Representative John Tolan (Democrat), of California, on his migratory workers bill. She expressed the opinion that the legislation would alleviate distress both for the migrant who moves over the country from one job to another and for those who have been uprooted from land worked by their families for generations.

The audience arose in churchly quiet when Mrs. Roosevelt arrived. It stood and applauded loudly when she left.

Dr. Tippy Heard

Dr. Worth M. Tippy, seminar leader and former official of the Council of Churches of Christ in America, and Representative John Sparkman (Democrat), of Alabama, a member of the Tolan Migration Committee, outlined the migrant problem before Mrs. Roosevelt arrived.

Between four and five million American workers are without established homes, Dr. Tippy said. He spoke of the "hundreds of thousands of children who are not having an opportunity at life" and of the "hard-pressed mothers and anxious fathers."

He cited the "new unsettlement" of workers caused by the defense program, the recent migration of 25,000 to the District of Columbia and the 6,000 workmen who commute daily from Louisville, Ky., to jobs in Charlestown, Ind.

Creekman Fath, Tolan committee counsel; Dr. Robert K. Lamb, its investigator, and Miss Etta Mae Russell, juvenile court worker of the Washington Council of Church Women, were also on the speakers' platform.

Washington School for Secretaries, massed in the National Press Club auditorium for a Christian Mission program, heard the Rev. Theodore Adams advise that there can be no democracy without a religious foundation. He warned that "its costs to keep democracy or anything else worthwhile." He is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Richmond, Va.

A student commented after the program:

Other Mission team speakers appeared at the Madeira School, Greenway, Va.; Mount Ranier and Lakeland (Md.) High Schools, and Howard University.

As the evening area mass meetings again drew capacity audiences, Dr. Arthur L. Kinsolving declared that "the one great contribution of Christianity to the social problem is the demonstration that fellowship is possible even to those who deeply disagree."

"This does not mean that the Christians must not take active part in the struggle between right and wrong," said the Princeton Episcopal cleric at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

Dr. E. Stanley Jones, addressing the area meeting at McKendree Methodist Church, said that a "valid and vital program of human reconstruction" must include charity with justice, care of the socially and politically disinherited, regard for the Christian basis for physical health, and the realization of the possibility of a "fresh start" in life.

"It seems incredible," said the Rev. Harold C. Phillips at Foundry Methodist area meeting, "that we learned nothing from the last war except how to make this one more deadly."

"We went back to the same old-fashioned ways, the same old-fashioned methods and, of course, are reaping the same old-fashioned results. Only the meek, the teachable, will inherit the earth, because the teachable are the adaptable and the adaptable survive." He is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Cleveland.

Tuberculosis Association Report Is Due Soon

Ross Garrett, head of the District Health Security Administration said a report on the activities of the Tuberculosis Association would be made public soon.

Tompkins Low Bidder To Complete Armory

Charles H. Tompkins Construction Co. yesterday submitted the low base bid of $1,357,900 to complete the National Guard Armory.

First unit, nearly completed, also was built by the Tompkins company, a local firm. Capt. John Person, Assistant Engineer Commissioner, said if the District accepted certain alternates in the bid "most needed" the cost would be $1,378,680, which is well within the amount available for the structure.

Wilbur S. Finch Gets Station WINX Citizenship Award

Wilbur S. Finch, member of the fourth generation of a family of District residents, last night was awarded the 1941 Station WINX award to Washington's Citizen of the Year, as the person "who has rendered the most outstanding service to the community of Washington in the past year."

Lawrence Heller, owner of the radio station, announced the award in a "Between the Headlines" program last night.

Finch is president of the District Suffrage Association, chairman of the local suffrage committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, chairman of the Federation's special committee on reorganization of the District Government, former president of the Burroughs Citizens Association and former chairman of the Conference of Northeast Suburban Citizens Associations.

Republicans Urge Lower Debt Rise

Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee, contending that the proposed $16,000,000,000 increase in the public debt limit to $65,000,000,000 could be used to finance "further Administration extravagances," declared yesterday an $11,000,000,000 increase would be "more than adequate."

The Republicans proposed creation of a nonpartisan Congressional committee to coordinate Federal revenues and expenditures; economizing in nonmilitary expenditures; prevention of wasteful expenditure of military appropriations; increasing Federal revenues to pay currently for as much of the defense program as possible and exercise of caution in increasing the public debt.

Widow Might Serve Out Simpson's Term

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Feb. 4.—A movement to have Mrs. Helen Louise Knickerbocker Simpson, widow of Kenneth F. Simpson, fill out the unexpired term of her husband in the House of Representatives, was launched today by a group of friends who proposed her nomination by the Democratic as well as the Republican party.

The proposal was made in a statement signed by Mrs. Frederick H. Ecker, wife of the vice president and chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; Russell Davenport, editor of Fortune, and personal representative of Wendell L. Willkie, during the Presidential campaign; Sam A. Lewisohn, banker, and Frederick B. Payne, dealer in bonds.

Earlier, Dr. J. Rice Gibbs, member of the Fifteenth Assembly District Republican Club, said he was directing a campaign to make Newbold Morris, president of the city council, the Republican nominee for Simpson's seat.

TRY THIS VERY FAST RELIEF FOR PAINFUL SYMPTOMS OF COLDS

3 Steps shown here start to relieve both aches and sore-throat in a short time

1. To relieve headache, body discomfort and aches, take 2 Bayer Aspirin Tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.
2. For sore throat from cold, dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in ½ glass of water and gargle. Pain, rawness are eased in a very short time.
3. Check temperature. If you have a fever and temperature does not go down — if throat pain is not quickly relieved, call your doctor.

Quick-acting Bayer Aspirin does it.

Don't wait if you even suspect you are catching a cold. At the first sign, follow the directions in the pictures above—the simplest and among the most effective methods known to modern science.

See Your Doctor. Even though he may wholeheartedly approve using Bayer Aspirin to relieve painful symptoms, you should not fail to see your family physician, because many colds may lead to serious consequences. Largely with medical approval, this simple, scientific method of relief has taken the place of old-fashioned strong medicine for colds, which may upset the system. Literally millions have adopted it.

Try this way. You will say it is unequalled, we are sure. When you buy, be sure you get the fast-acting Bayer product you want. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name, not for just "aspirin" alone. And see that you get it.

DRAMATIC SPEED TEST
Drop a genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablet in water. Almost instantly it starts to disintegrate—is ready to go to work. Make this test, and see for yourself why Bayer Aspirin acts so quickly!

Now You Won't Have to Build a New Garage

Here are Four New Additions to the BUICK SPECIAL Line that Compact Motorcar Bigness into Handy Size

Buick SPECIAL *4-door Sedan, model 47, $1021. White sidewall tires extra.

THINK back over what's been happening in automobiles and see if this isn't right:

In search for impressive size, cars have been getting longer and longer.

Bumper has retreated from bumper until there's hardly room left in the family garage for the lawn mower and the good wife's gardening basket.

Does that mean you'll have to build a new garage to enjoy a big car's glories? Not now!

For there are four new Buicks on the market — additions to our 1941 SPECIAL series — that let you indulge your big-car tastes in spite of 1929-car-size garages.

They are big cars in ability — with a 115-horsepower Buick FIREBALL engine that can be stepped up to 125 "horse" by the addition of Compound Carburetion at slight extra cost.

They are big cars in their room — with plenty of leg-, elbow- and head-room in their spacious interiors.

They are cars big in beauty, with all their trim Buick style and finish — they are big in value born of typical Buick quality and workmanship.

But — they fit your garage! They handle like baby carriages. They park on small change. They stretch every gallon of gasoline over still greater mileage.

And all that because we have packed this Buick goodness and ability onto a 118-inch wheelbase chassis and trimmed down its bumper-to-bumper length.

So if you've been itching for a big car — but wondering where you'd find room for it — better hop right over to see these beauties now.

Pro-German Leader Quits Sofia Cabinet

Copyright by New York Times

Sofia, Bulgaria, Feb. 4.—The long-expected crisis in the cabinet came today with the resignation of Ivan Bogrianoff from the ministry of agriculture.

It is impossible to say yet whether this will lead to a country-wide split between partisans of this pro-German statesman and those of the present government.

With a certain amount of drama Premier Philoff stood up before the Sobranje (Parliament) and read first a royal decree to the effect that Bogrianoff had resigned and that his post would be taken over by the prime minister; and then a government statement saying that there would be no changes in policy concerning agriculture, because that policy has been voted by the whole cabinet and was not a personal one of the retired minister. The news fell in the assembly like a bombshell.

Bogrianoff did not give his resignation to Premier Philoff, as is the custom, but to King Boris directly. This act has caused more speculation in Sofia than any other part of the day's big events.

In some circles it is thought that Bogrianoff drew the displeasure of the King by his attempts at widespread reforms in agriculture, since King Boris was at least, for the moment, in favor of not trying to do too much in these difficult days.

Bardossy Succeeds Csaky

Budapest, Feb. 4 (INS).—Laszlo Bardossy, 51-year-old diplomat, tonight was appointed Hungarian foreign minister to fill the vacancy left by the recent death of Count Csaky.

Formerly minister to Bucharest, Bardossy also had served as chief of the Hungarian press department and charge de'affaires of the Hungarian legation in London.

Willkie Confers With De Valera

His journey to Dublin came as a surprise, after an inspection of damage wrought by German bombers in the British Midlands and Manchester-Liverpool area.

"The journey to Eire was well worth while," he said. "Mr. De Valera and I had a very frank discussion."

The former Republican Presidential candidate would not go into details about his talk with the Irish Premier, but before he was closeted with De Valera, he said:

"We plan to discuss Eire's position in the light of the experiences of Holland and Belgium, and also to explore Eire's attitude on American aid to Britain."

Willkie flew to and from Dublin, and arrived in London in the afternoon just in time to have tea with the King and Queen.

Afterwards, as he prepared to bid farewell to England even as more Nazi raiders droned over London, Willkie summed up his impressions thus:

"I don't want to draw any conclusions here. Yet there is one thing I can definitely say without question—the British are a united people.

"I think the British people are almost miraculously fortunate in their leadership at the present time—and that is without going into the qualities of the King and Queen and without speaking of their fine characters.

"I would say I doubt whether at any time in history any man has been more ideally suited to the task he is called on to carry through than is Winston Churchill."

Willkie plans to take off for New York on a clipper from Lisbon Wednesday night.

12 Escape Unhurt At Langley Field As Bomber Crashes

By the Associated Press

Langley Field, Va., Feb. 4.—Twelve Army Air Corps men escaped unhurt when an Army bomber, taking off from the local air base for Dayton, Ohio, went into a ground loop, crashed and burned this afternoon.

They had come here to take part in maneuvers while Secretary of War Stimson visited the airdrome Monday.

The big ship roared down the runway, went into its ground loop and crashed, flames igniting the craft.

The group included Capt. Chester P. Gilger, pilot; Capt. William Lewis, jr., copilot; Second Lieutenants Donald M. Keyser, Duane H. Skiles, Ted H. Holsteen and Maurice Hogan, Air Corps Reserve; Staff Sergeants Brase K. Brown, Charles H. Ross and Mason J. Todd; Corpl. Charles O. Watkins and Pvt. First Class James M. McKales.

BRITISH CAPTURE ANOTHER ITALIAN BASE—This "time-table" map shows the successive dates on which Italian bases in Egypt and Libya have been occupied by the British in their drive west from Egypt toward Bengasi. Derna was captured January 30 and yesterday the British occupied Cirene, for another gain of 60 miles in a drive which now has run approximately 250 miles. conform to the change and himself assumed the post of police chief.

Gonzalez likewise resisted government efforts to remove certain bureaus from naval control and return them to civil administration, as provided in the new constitution.

"Pedraza, knowing that Col. Gonzalez was dissatisfied because he had taken from him perquisites of certain civil departments" Batista said, "joined forces with Gonzalez and, calling together all their officers, they put the issue squarely up to them—Batista or us."

He said Pedraza "mobilized his forces and organized an offensive" while Gonzalez ordered up steam in naval vessels, including the gunboats Patria and Cuba stationed at Havana. Naval cannon were uncovered and patrols established outside Batista's palace, the President said.

"I watched them from the balcony," Batista related, "but I was not worrying because I knew that I could count on the loyalty of the navy."

Late last night, he continued, he drove to military headquarters at Camp Columbia, about 11 miles from the center of Havana. Only Benitez and one other officer accompanied him.

"Benitez drove the car," Batista said. "I sat in the back seat in disguise. I went to Camp Columbia and called together the armed forces. They responded to my appeal. The guilty men were arrested, and returned to their homes . . ."

Pedraza, who became army chief when Batista resigned to campaign for President in 1939, never came to the palace for consultations, leaving Batista ignorant of conditions, and the police chief was never at headquarters, the President said.

"The City of Havana had been converted into a public gambling house," he asserted.

Visitors, he said, begged him to try to handle the problem without bloodshed, realizing that "the pride and vanity of three men were endangering the entire existence of the republic."

Bodies of Plane Victims Taken From Mountain

Morton, Wash., Feb. 4 (U.P.).—The bodies of seven men killed January 16 when a twin-motored Army bomber missed clearing the top of Deschutes Peak by only 20 feet were brought to this lumber hamlet tonight on pack horses.

The bodies were mutilated and burned almost beyond recognition. One of the victims was thrown on top of the peak, and others were found as far as 100 yards from the top. Instruments indicated the plane was traveling at top speed when it hit.

Petain Rejects Hitler's Demands

Paris at 6:08 p. m.

Darlan then conferred alone for 15 minutes with Petain and it was understood that he will return to Paris soon in an effort to keep the negotiations from complete collapse and "tone down" the "pretentions" of Laval to a point where Petain can accept them.

At the conference with Petain were Darlan and the other two members of Petain's "inner triumvirate," Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin and War Minister Gen. Charles Huntziger.

Until tonight's developments it had been expected that Laval would be restored to power, either as the powerful leader of a three-man or four-man "inner government" under Petain, or as Petain's delegate to Paris to handle technical matters of "collaboration" with Hitler.

Rumanian Schoolgirls Hide Guns in Dresses

Bucharest, Feb. 4 (AP).—Rumanian authorities said today a search in four girls' high schools had resulted in discovery of a great number of revolvers, many of them hanging from gold or silver chains inside the girls' dresses.

Officials said the girls probably hid the weapons in this way for their Iron Guard fathers or brothers.

Germans Raid Eastern Coast in Bitter Cold, British Strike Back With 2 Attacks on Brest

By the Associated Press

London, (Wednesday) Feb. 5.—German bombers struck at England's eastern coast last night in the most widespread attack in about two weeks but nowhere was the attack described as "really heavy."

They flew through bitter weather that blanketed part of France with snow and concentrated on an east coast port for several hours.

One hotel was partly destroyed in a southeast coastal town, and among the bodies recovered from the debris was that of Jim McMurray, a former heavyweight boxing champion in the India army.

Hostile craft were reported over East Anglia, the Midlands, southwest England and Wales and near Liverpool.

The "all clear" sounded in the London area before 11 p. m.

The day had brought announcements of a double British blow at the Nazi-occupied French seaport of Brest and of the destruction of five German planes over Britain and the Channel.

The day's bag, the British Press Association reported, brought to 30 the number of German planes shot down in 1941, against one R. A. F. plane lost in defense.

Two formations of coastal command bombers—(this command is making increasing use of American planes)—assaulted Brest Monday night and again at dawn. Each attack was officially described as successful.

The British admitted one plane was missing from these operations.

Off Suffolk yesterday a German bomber was shot down into the sea, the air ministry reported, after it had bombed a town, damaging business houses, buildings, public services and causing "a small number of casualties."

A Local Judge

The retirement of Justice Peyton Gordon from the District Court, after a half century of service to this community, opens the way for an appointment which could be of great help in clearing the congested civil docket. Justice Gordon, an able and skillful jurist who nevertheless retained the common touch has been sorely missed since last April, when illness forced him to discontinue work on the bench. His resignation in the public interest sets an example which might well be followed by all judges who are physically unfit for their strenuous duties.

The enforced absence of Justice Gordon is one of several reasons why the District Court is 12 to 16 months behind on its cases. It is important, therefore, that the vacancy be filled quickly. It is equally important that a justice be chosen who is familiar with the unusual procedure in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. An outsider, however talented, must waste months of valuable time educating himself in the rules of this court, which is unique in that it handles not only Federal business but cases which elsewhere would be in the province of State and municipal tribunals.

Fortunately, among those mentioned for the appointment are several eminently suited Washington lawyers. From these the President should be able to make a choice as appropriate as that last year of David A. Pine. The District must not, in any event, be victimized by the school of thought which regards the Federal judiciary as a medium for rewarding or disposing of retired politicians. We ought to have a local man for the District Court bench.

Stuart J. Fuller

By the death of Stuart J. Fuller the United States has lost a remarkably able and devoted public servant who played an important and constructive role in the international effort to control the opium evil. Entering the Foreign Service in 1906 he was entrusted with a succession of important consular posts in various parts of the world during the next 24 years. In 1930 he was brought back to Washington to become divisional assistant in the Department of State and the following year was made assistant chief of the Far Eastern Division. He will long be remembered for the expert skill he displayed in the years from 1932 to 1939 as this Nation's representative on various League of Nations bodies which attempted to suppress the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs. A man with a great gift of friendship with men of all nations and classes, he could also be hard and unyielding where the interests of the United States were involved. The progress that had been made before the outbreak of the present war in controlling the traffic in narcotics was in no small measure the result of Mr. Fuller's valiant and unremitting efforts. He was a credit to the Foreign Service and to the United States.

The Dead Hand

It is related of the first John Jacob Astor, who founded the famous dynasty, that the ship on which he emigrated to America was caught off the Virginia capes in a midwinter gale so furious that wreck seemed not impossible. At the height of the storm young Astor appeared on deck in his best Sunday clothes. To an astonished fellow passenger he explained that if he were saved from the wreck, his clothes would be saved too, whereas if he perished, the clothes would naturally be of no further use to him.

The same instinct for anticipating emergencies which later enabled him to buy up the most valuable New York real estate almost as cheaply as he bought up furs from the Indians seems to have survived in his descendants. At any rate, the British Government is likely to strike a snag when it seeks to liquidate Lord Astor's holdings in the United States. For the property may be not only beyond reach of the British government but possibly even beyond that of Lord Astor himself. The late Viscount Astor, it seems, made his estate into a trust over which the City Bank Farmers' Trust Co., of New York, as trustee, is said to have full control.

The case of these American holdings of the English branch of the Astor family engaged the interest of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in one of its hearings last week on the lend-lease bill. The value of the holdings has been estimated at $46,000,000 and they include some of the best-known sites in America. Doubtless the British liquidating agency will encounter similar legal difficulties in other instances. It is an interesting illustration of the role which "the dead hand" has played in the preservation and perpetuation of some great fortunes.

Economics In The Air

Senator Wheeler's first statement on coming back from Florida doesn't show much knowledge of the economics of air defense. He charges that the large ratio of our aircraft production which we have sent to Britain constitutes an impairment of our own defense. The Senator, in our opinion, is wrong from the standpoint of strategy. The more planes we send to Britain, the better chance Britain has of survival and the quicker we could demobilize. Aside from this argument, however, the Senator is misinformed in his economics. Economically speaking, we ought to be grateful to the British for buying from us so large a ratio of our own aircraft production.

Certainly the totalitarians would have been grateful for such a customer during the period of their arming. Both the Nazis and the Italians combed the world for customers. They offered to sell planes under cost. Why? Because of the high rate of obsolescence in the aircraft industry. In an incredibly short time designers working in the laboratory made them outmoded, and in twelve months or so they were equivalent to junk. But the industry had to be kept at work in turning out planes according to the latest blueprints. Customers, therefore, helped the totalitarians to do two things at the same time: absorb soon-to-be-improved models and nurse their capacity.

Alas, there weren't enough customers. So that both the Russians and the Italians found themselves stuck with relatively antiquated machines when war broke out. This has been proved in the air fighting in this war. One Finn, flying an imported model, could account for up to ten times the Russian S. B.'s. Equally poor has been the showing of the Italian Capronis. A story, for example, is told of a R. A. F. pilot en route to Egypt who wired this brief emplanation of a delay: "Delayed. Met five Capronis. Downed four. On my way." The explanation, with all respect to the British airman, was mainly the technical superiority of the British machines.

Nazi Germany, of course, is in a different case. The Nazis could offset the economics of obsolescence because they were working on a strict timetable. They knew they were going to use force. They knew when they were going to use it. For both reasons they were able to fix the exact date at which to switch from experimenting with test planes to mass production of the most advanced models. It was an advantage which more than anything else gave the Nazis the edge on everybody. It insured Italian and Russian subordination; it left the British and the French bewildered. The British on their part refused to believe what was plain to such technicians as Col. Lindbergh, while even the more realistic French were in a constant dilemma as to when to turn from quality to quantity production. Truly a power bent upon aggression in this day of quick obsolescence—an obsolescence which is so fast as to demand the blitzkrieg—has a tremendous advantage.

How fortunate we are that all these lessons are now crystal clear to those with eyes to see and read! We can turn them to formidable advantage. Thanks to the British, the blitz has been taken out of the krieg, and we have the leisure to build up our capacity so that at any time we could switch to serial production of models that would make our air power irresistible. Economics as well as strategy, therefore, make British purchases a godsend. Far from complaining that the British are taking so many planes, Senator Wheeler, merely on the score of our physical defense, should be grumbling that we aren't sending them more. For the British, by taking our best product at the time, are subsidizing the only thing that really matters, namely, our capacity for building better planes in the future. All we need, in addition, are the training and experimental planes, and, of course, the genius in design and the administrative resiliency which will eventually turn them into junk.

It's The Spirit, Sir

Beware the testimony of those who show that Britain hasn't a chance against Nazi Germany because she is so far behind the Nazis in armament. Petain and Weygand made that mistake. And Col. Lindbergh, with his battery of statistics, repeated it. That master psychologist, Adolf Hitler, knew better. In Mein Kampf (181st German edition, pp. 365-6) he wrote:

> To recover Germany's power you must not ask "How are we to manufacture arms?" but "How are we to breed the spirit that makes a people capable of bearing arms?" If that spirit rules a people, they will find a thousand ways, any one leading to armament! Give a coward 10 pistols, and when attacked, he will fail to fire a single shot. He can do less with them than a man of spirit with a mere blackthorn.

Federal Powers

The Supreme Court's decision upholding the Fair Labor Standards Act is significant chiefly because it brings to full flower the enormous grant of authority to Congress in the so-called commerce clause. The Supreme Court now seems to have completed the expansion of this clause which it began by upholding the National Labor Relations Act four years ago. At that time the Court concluded that Congress has power to require collective bargaining in manufacturing plants because of the effect of strikes on interstate commerce. Later it decided, in effect, that Congress may control agricultural production through the interstate commerce clause. So the Court's blessing for the Wage-Hour Act comes as a sort of final confirmation of the Administration's claim that it has ample power under the organic law to regulate the country's economic system.

The current opinion in the case of the Darby Lumber Co. is truly sweeping in its implications. The "old court," as Attorney General Jackson calls it, had held that Congress could not use its powers over interstate commerce to regulate child labor. That opinion, known as Hammer v. Dagenhart, is now specifically overruled. The Court says in unmistakable language that "the power of Congress under the commerce clause is plenary to exclude any article from interstate commerce subject only to the specific prohibitions of the Constitution." Congress may deny the channels of commerce to any product manufactured under conditions which it deems to be injurious to the public health, morals or welfare.

Notice is given that the Court will no longer examine the purpose of a Congressional act to determine whether its motive may be legitimately sought under the terms of the Constitution. The use to which the commerce clause may be put is a question of legislative judgment which is beyond the reach of the courts. Obviously this reasoning opens an enormous field of regulatory powers to Congress. Presumably it may fix wages and prices, impose production quotas on industries and workmen or otherwise regulate manufacturing establishments, even more rigorously than the railroads are now regulated.

Nor are these powers confined to labor and industry producing directly for interstate commerce. The Court recognizes the commingling of products for interstate and intrastate trade. Fair labor standards may be set up, it says, even though they involve control over activities confined to a single State. The reserve powers left to the States appear to have shrunk to a mere scintilla in the economic field.

This series of opinions bearing upon the commerce clause has accomplished most of what was sought a few years ago by the suggested constitutional amendment giving Congress full power to regulate industry, labor and agriculture. Except in the case of the most localized activities, Federal authorities now seem to have acquired such power by the simple process of inflating the commerce clause. The result appears to meet with general satisfaction, for it permits Congress to legislate in fields where State controls are clearly unsatisfactory. Yet the change that has been effected is scarcely less significant than it would have been if accomplished through a constitutional amendment.

The underlying fact is that our Federal Government, which had traditionally been regarded as a government of limited powers, has now emerged as a government of almost unlimited powers, at least so far as economic and social legislation is concerned. Regardless of whether or not one approves the method by which this result has been brought about, reflection upon the new role of Congress in this context should be a sobering experience. For, while the exercise of limited powers left many problems unsolved, the concentration of almost unlimited power in a centralized government may be a source of disintegration as well as progress in an expansive democratic country such as our own.

GROW, WILLOW, SWIFTLY

An old wives' tale, and yet I hesitate
To plant this willow seedling by my door
Where wind is tempered and the sun shines late,
Lest, nurtured thus, growth will be rapid, sure;
Lest, suddenly, the willow's shade will lie
A grave's length on the earth with ample breadth;
When this is so the old crones prophesy
The planter will be summoned soon by death.
Yet lovely is the willow's April green
And softly tongued the leaf in wind-blown night;
The lacy boughs let sunshine fall between
To gild the threshold with ethereal light.
Grow, willow, swiftly; doubt is now at rest;
In life, in death, your shade will warm this breast.

Letters To The Editor

Of Italian Valor

After more than four centuries Niccolo Machiavelli's judgment of Italian arms and valor still stands unchallenged. Said the great Florentine:

". . . The third kind of armies are such as have neither natural courage nor discipline. Of this kind are the Italian armies of our time, which are entirely useless. Unless they fall upon an enemy that by some accident has taken to flight, they are never victorious. Without citing any special instances, we have daily proofs of their total lack of valo.." (The Discourses.) ". . . Look how in duels and in contests of a few the Italians are superior in strength, dexterity and intelligence. But when it comes to armies they make a poor show . . . hence it comes about that for so long a time, in all the wars waged during the last 20 years, whenever there has been an entirely Italian army it has always been a failure, as witness first Taro, then Alexandria, Capua, Genoa, Vaila, Bologna and Mestri." (The Prince.)

We may add in our own time Spain, Greece, Albania, Sidi Barrani, Bardia and Tobruk, with all due respect to the defenders of the valor of Italian armies against universal American criticism.

Theodore Roosevelt

The following quotation from Theodore Roosevelt seems to contain a message for us at this time:

"Though conditions of life have grown so puzzling in their complexity, though the changes have been so vast, yet we may remain absolutely sure of one thing: That now, as ever in the past, and as it ever will be in the future, there can be no substitute for the elemental virtues, for the elemental qualities to which we allude when we speak of a man not only as a good man but as emphatically a man. We can build up the standard of individual citizenship and individual well-being; we can raise the national standard and make it what it can and shall be made, only by each of us steadfastly keeping in mind that there can be no substitute for the world-old, humdrum, commonplace qualities of truth, justice and courage, thrift, industry, commonsense and genuine sympathy with and fellow feeling for others."

Subjective Education

Subjective education is more important than objective education in the development of character, personality and self-expression. Less seems to be known about it, if we judge by how infrequently such teaching is imparted in the classroom or practiced by example.

Subjective education consists in training the pupil in self-expression and in the development of ethical behavior and of those qualities and attitudes of heart and mind which only a well-balanced citizen and truly cultured person has.

Objective education is merely a pouring-in process of the facts of knowledge with neither thought nor attempt to mold good citizens. The first method of teaching stresses spiritual values and significance of things or facts, while the other sees only mental processes and material values, and is a skeleton containing only the dry bones of facts. But even facts may be enlivened by the enthusiasm for subjective values, and by zeal for developing the character and personality of our American youth. That is the chief criticism of the teaching in our colleges and public schools today: It is cold, logical, scientific, atheistic, factual, devoid of enthusiasm and spiritual significance.

Unless teachers at such a crisis stress personality and character development along with Americanism and, by personal example to students, inculcate and enforce discipline, self-control, law, system and order among the youth of today, the latter are headed for the rocks of unpreparedness to face the world's reconstruction problems of tomorrow. Teachers who have not the vision to see and teach these things are recreant to public trust and unworthy of confidence. The times demand spiritual stamina and spiritual regeneration.

Presidential Power

Hitler could not have grown without a fertile soil, but he must be stopped, if possible, for the good of civilization. I am in favor of aid to England, to be given as promptly and efficiently as possible, but in the process let us not imitate Hitler's methods. Some of our columnists and editorial writers seem to hold the view that the President already has power under the Constitution to carry into effect practically all the things proposed in the pending bill, and more. Says Mr. Lindley, for example: "If the President wants to go to war, he already has all the power he needs to do it." This he could do, it is said, through his control of the Army and Navy, and by virtue of the powers inherent in his position as head of the Government.

The Constitution gives Congress expressly the power to declare war. The word "war," as there used, is defined as a "contest by force between states;" an "armed conflict of sovereign powers." A declaration of war is an act of the Nation, and the provision giving Congress the responsibility of such a declaration was not intended as a dead letter. While the President undoubtedly has the power, although limited, to use the armed forces of the country in emergencies, such as invasion or insurrection, the decision as to whether the circumstances constitute such an offense as to justify or require entry into war against another nation is left to Congress. Necessarily the President should use his judgment in handling the situation until his report and recommendation can be acted upon; but if he should ignore the right of Congress and carry the country into war in his own discretion, it seems obvious that he would be open to impeachment for such a violation of the Constitution.

The act of our President in seeking authority from Congress for what he may wish to do is not merely an act of generosity, but a proper and necessary recognition of the right of a coordinate branch of the Government.

A Tribute To William G. McAdoo

I have just come from the funeral services for a truly great American—William Gibbs McAdoo.

As I sat in the Church of the Epiphany, I saw about me many high in the councils of the Government—the Vice President, members of the Cabinet, Senators, Representatives, heads of departments, and some who had served their country with the late Senator in the World War, such as Bernard Baruch.

But even more significant to me were the large numbers of those whom Charlie Chaplin called "the little people." More significant, I say, while he will take his place in history as a statesman, a lawmaker, a builder, a political leader, I think the real measure of his stature was his capacity for knowing "the little people"—their problems, their aspirations, their feelings. And not only in knowing them, but in constantly striving to do something to make their lives a little easier, happier, more secure.

Back in 1914, I was a cub reporter on the Drovers Daily Journal in Chicago. McAdoo, as Secretary of the Treasury, and David Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, were traveling about the country explaining to groups of bankers and businessmen the working of the new Federal Reserve System, which was about to become effective, and for which McAdoo was partly responsible. I was sent to cover their meeting in a downtown hall.

Frightened and ignorant of economics and kindred sciences, I sat through the meeting with only a vague idea of what it was all about. If I could not understand it, how could I explain it to my farmer readers? So, when the session was ended and the gathering broke up into little groups, clustered mostly about the two Cabinet officers, I singled out Houston as the more likely to be patiently helpful. I approached him with trepidation. I got only hard looks for my intrusion from the "big shots" surrounding him—and a rebuff from the Secretary, who was "too busy" to give any more time just then to a young reporter.

Hurt, and with tears pretty close to the surface, I turned away. I felt a hand on my shoulder, and turned around to look up into the quizzical smile of the Secretary of the Treasury.

"What's the matter, son?" he asked.

I blurted out my predicament. Flinging a bony arm about my shoulders, he led me to a settee across the room. There he translated into words of one syllable—that even my immature and untrained mind could understand—the workings of Federal Reserve. We were constantly interrupted by bankers and others, who wanted the Secretary's ear—and couldn't understand how he could waste so much time on a mere boy—but he waved each of them aside with a smile until he was sure I had a complete picture.

Through the intervening years, McAdoo has never deviated from the character he revealed to me on that day. No service was ever too small, or too great, for him to perform for anyone—literally anyone—who needed his help.

His political philosophy—an intelligent liberalism—never varied. I have occasionally used him as a political "measuring rod" in writing an editorial. Back in the Wilson Administration, he was often regarded as an extreme radical. Serving as a Senator from California during the Roosevelt Administration, he was more often classified as a conservative. Why the change? There was none. He was just the same; the country, as a whole, had moved to the left.

During the 1937 senatorial primary campaign, there was a gathering of Democratic politicians in Santa Barbara to discuss McAdoo's candidacy. The "Ham and Eggs" fallacy was at its height. His chief opponent had espoused this economic necromancy wholeheartedly. Certain of his self-appointed advisers urged him also to espouse it, or at least remain neutral, pointing out that it was a State, not a Federal issue, and that he could avoid almost certain defeat by such expediency.

He listened patiently through the interminable arguments, in which he took no part. Finally, he said:

"But it's all wrong. It is cruelly misleading hundreds of thousands of our people. Somebody has got to tell the truth about it. That somebody might as well, might better, be me. My mind is made up. Nothing can change it. Political office never meant as much to me as a clear conscience."

And so Senator McAdoo was retired to private life . . . because he was honest and unafraid. His passing is a loss to the Nation he served so well, and to the thousands to whom he was a true friend. And we can say, as Stanton said of Lincoln, "He now belongs to the ages."

The Post Impressionist

Luke

THEY are a strange sort of people. They live within a relatively small area: a flat, sandy region covered with stunted pines and productive of little outside of blueberries and cranberries. When there is picking to be done they appear, when the picking is finished they disappear. They shoot deer out of season with firearms dating back to the Civil War. Occasionally they shoot one another, sometimes visitors. Their origin is a matter of conjecture. They are usually referred to as pineys.

There was one that I remembered especially. He was not at all special in appearance though—of medium height with a nondescript face topped by stringy black hair. His name was Luke, and that was all the name he had. He never knew his father's name and had forgotten his mother's.

As a picker he was worth about what he got paid—practically nothing. The pineys held him in great esteem, however, and there was always someone to help him. This esteem was due to the only accomplishment capable of inspiring such feelings in these people. Luke was noticeably lawless in a lawless group. He was also the deadliest marksman in the section and owned a rifle scarcely ten years old of which he was passionately fond.

His proficiency as a marksman arose from his possession of the most remarkable eyesight I have ever come across. The pineys claimed that he could see more at night than most persons could during the day. Knowing the man, I never doubted this, for he always struck me as being more than half wild and if the other creatures of the pines could see at night he could too. As an old picker once said, "Luke'll outlook a dam' buzzard."

Luke was held in great esteem by the pineys, but he had no real friends among them. I saw him every picking season for five years and during that time never saw him smile and can't recall having heard him speak more than ten words. Most of these were not technically words, but affirmative or negative grunts.

He had a wife, but ignored her as completely as he did everyone else. She used to come along to help pick with a small army of skinny brown urchins in tow. They all picked, and the combined efforts of the family generally approximated what a single hard-working picker could do. It was two years before I realized she was Luke's wife, or that he even knew her, and I only found out by accident.

I happened to be walking past a group of pickers when they had stopped work for the noon meal and saw a woman walk up to Luke and speak to him. She was a rather unpleasant looking creature with a sallow complexion and chest like a washboard.

The pickers usually left Luke pretty much alone, so I stopped to see what his reaction would be.

It was immediate and violent. He stood up, struck her across the mouth with enough force to knock her over backwards, and then sat down and resumed his meal.

That sort of treatment seemed to demand an explanation, at least, so I said as much to the overseer.

"'At's all right," he said, "jest Luke's old woman tryin' to cut in on his lunch. Serves her dam well right."

After this I kept an eye on them both, but never saw Luke speak to her or even indicate that he knew she existed.

The last time I was down there in the picking season was at the close of a dry, hot summer. The danger from forest fires, an ever-present one in the pines, was greater than usual. The pickers were uneasy, their bosses more so.

But Luke was the same as ever. He plucked an occasional berry during the day, and vanished into the pines at night. "Fat chance a fire'd have of catchin' Luke."

We sometimes wondered about the rifle. He apparently hid it in the pines when he picked. But it seemed impossible that Luke would expose that highly prized possession to danger. There was no possibility of theft—none of the pickers could have found his cache, though the inarticulate creature who bore his children might. But fire was something else again, and we sometimes wondered.

And that year the fire came, without warning, sweeping through the tinder-like woods with a speed that made all efforts to halt it merely laughable. Yet, as so often happens, the wind shifted at the last moment and the bogs themselves were spared.

We were congratulating ourselves on our good fortune when Luke's wife was missed. Luke hadn't seen her. And only after considerable probing of his nondescript progeny did we learn that she had "gone ta fetch his shootin' arn."

Numerous questions were fired at Luke as he strode into the still smoking pines. There weren't many answers. But we did learn that she had known where he kept the rifle. But we did learn that he had become uneasy the day before and moved the rifle to a safer place.

I was with him when he found the charred and shapeless body. It wasn't very pretty. Luke just stood and looked at it awhile. He prodded it with his foot, then addressed it in a harsh and colorless voice, "you goddam fool."

He turned suddenly—he who could "outlook a dam' buzzard"—and striding away, crashed head-on into the fire-blackened trunk of an old pine.

Are We Dumb?

Mr. La Follette's Testimony

THOMPSON

IT SEEMS TO ME that the testimony of Mr. Philip La Follette and others before the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate reveals the perennial doubt that Americans have of their political sagacity when dealing with Europe. Former Gov. La Follette seems to think that we are not bright enough to take care of ourselves and of our own interests in any arrangements that might be made with Great Britain. It's the old mentality that we had better keep away from Europe because those poker players will strip us. We are still innocents abroad.

THAT IS certainly the implication in Mr. La Follette's warning that maybe "a new Hoare-Laval deal" would be cooked up, which would find the British making a separate peace on the best terms to themselves and leaving the United States to prosecute the war "with all the world."

Now, first of all, I can't follow the connection between the Hoare-Laval deal and the idea of Britain making a separate peace on the best terms to themselves. What "separate peace" did the Hoare-Laval deal ratify? Neither Britain nor France had any obligations to Ethiopia, except under the terms of the League of Nations. And the entire League of Nations, of which Italy herself was a member, was driving Britain and France to make a deal and not go to war over Ethiopia.

Does Mr. La Follette think that France should have gone to war over Ethiopia? And if he does, does he think that the fall of the British Empire would be of less consequence to the United States than the fall of Ethiopia was to Britain and France?

I CONFESS I cannot follow this sort of phony analogy. Nor do I see the logic in claiming, first, that Hitler will have his hands full, and that it is laughable to think that he is going to embark on the conquest of the Americas, and, second, that if and when the British can make a separate peace, we shall be left alone "to prosecute the war with all the world."

Our all-out aid to Britain is accompanied by definite commitments of Britain to us, regarding the British fleet. It presupposes a community of interests. That community of interests exists; it is real. It consists in a community of similar institutions, of similar attitudes regarding the freedom of the seas; of an identical interest in protecting access to raw materials—and almost all of those necessary to American industry are within the areas protected by the two fleets, and under the sovereignty of Britain or the Atlantic states that have come under Hitler's heel.

The proposal that we can best protect that community of interests by letting Hitler win the war and by letting the British Empire be divided between Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan, by letting Britain down because she may let us down, adds up to zero, as far as I can see.

It is the psychology of fear and distrust carried to its utmost. If you combine it with the advice of Senator Wheeler and of Gen. Wood that Britain should be pushed by us into making a peace, and the advice of Senator Walsh that after Britain has built factories on our soil and the whole country has made aid to Britain a fundamental policy, ratified by the platforms of both political parties and both candidates of those parties in the last election, we should now abandon all aid, it adds up to saying that it is better to trust your enemies than it is your friends.

And the net effect of this kind of behavior would simply mean that the whole world would conclude that the United States of America is a country with which no nation dares to consider an alliance.

In the days when we were the largest and strongest single state on earth we could afford to indulge in such a whimsical attitude. But in the world which is rapidly emerging in front of our eyes we cannot afford it. We need friends as much as those friends need us.

FORMER GOV. LA FOLLETTE says "the United States will be facing a united Europe no matter which side wins." I believe that the Governor is correct in this. But it is ridiculous to think that it makes no difference to us what sort of a united Europe we face.

Hitler's united Europe would be a standing menace to this country as long as this country was a democracy.

A united Europe in which the various nations are granted equality in proportion to their numbers would be the greatest friend this country ever had. One has to make a choice. For it is not a matter of indifference to us, nor has it been a matter of indifference throughout our entire history.

But Gov. La Follette seems to presume that the unity of Europe is a disaster for America in any case; that a Hitler-dominated Europe is no different from, for instance, a United States of Europe, and that if we can't back Britain up in a program to keep Europe divided, we had better not do anything at all.

WHAT AMERICA has most to fear is that we put ourselves in the position where we have not a friend on earth; where Britain will be forced to make an agreement with Germany, under a pro-German government, that will be directed against us.

The moment that happens the idea that we shall still hold the Western Hemisphere is childish and so is the idea that we shall make a little paradise in the United States that by the force of its example will defeat Hitler. This again seems to be Mr. La Follette's idea, for he said: "I think the best way to lick Hitler and what he stands for is to do the job we have to do here in the United States and the Western Hemisphere."

I agree with Mr. La Follette that we have got to do an infinitely better job in the United States and in the Western Hemisphere than we have done yet. I agree with him that aid to Britain is not enough and that we have got to meet our basic social and economic problems in a vastly more robust and intelligent way than we have done. But if we are caught with our social and economic problems, in the midst of a Nazi-dominated world in which we are completely encircled, we shall have a very hard time of it. We shall have a hard time of it in any case, but a reversal of our foreign policy will not make our domestic problems easier, it will make them almost insoluble.

Mr. La Follette is leaving out of account human psychology. If we let Britain down, it will be very hard to defend even American democracy to Americans.

BUT IT'S TOO bad that somebody did not ask Mr. La Follette the following question: "Mr. La Follette, did you not in the winter of 1939, when you were in Berlin, tell a small group of German industrialists there that in case Germany provoked a war, America would be in it up to the eyes? And what did you say to Mr. Daladier? You have reported what he said to you, but what did you say to him?"

Divided Ranks

By Joseph Alsop And Robert Kintner

Republicans Split

IF THE SIGNS on Capitol Hill mean anything, the prospects for rapid and favorable action on the lease-lend bill have considerably improved in the last fortnight. Immediately after the bill was introduced, the isolationist high command managed to raise a pretty impressive ruckus. The ruckus failed, however, to spread from Washington to the country. Thus the isolationists have neither the resources nor the self-confidence a minority always needs to make a serious showing against the Congressional majority.

The best proof of the new trend is to be found among the Republicans. It is axiomatic that Presidential measures cannot be defeated, or even substantially modified, unless the Republicans unite against them. The heretical Democrats are too few to get anywhere without all the Republicans to help them along. And in this instance, although most Republicans undoubtedly dislike the lease-lend bill for its grants of power to the President, a surprising number are lining up on the Administration side.

THE SITUATION differs in the House and Senate. In the House, the influence of Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., is always on the side of isolationism. As usual, he has refrained from asking for isolationist commitments at the Republican conference. But he has made no secret of his personal opinion, and thus has herded all the timid and unwavering Republicans into the isolationist camp. The group of Republican House members who will follow Representative James Wadsworth in supporting the bill is comparatively small.

Fortunately it is in the Senate, where the course of the fight is far more doubtful, that important Republican defections are likely. Shortly after the start of the lease-lend fight, on the joint motion of Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, and Chan Gurney, of South Dakota, the anti-isolationist Republican Senators began a series of meetings. These informal gatherings to discuss the bill, generally held in the evening, have been attended by Aiken and Austin, of Vermont; Brewster and White, of Maine; Holman, of Oregon; Ball, of Minnesota, and Barbour, of New Jersey, as well as by Gurney and Bridges.

No promises have been asked or given. Several of the men present have shown sympathy for this or that amendment sponsored by the isolationists. But generally speaking, it seems fairly certain that at least eight Republican Senators will turn up on the anti-isolationist side when voting time comes.

Furthermore, the isolationist Republicans seem to be growing less fervent. This phenomenon is attributable to the wily party chieftain in the Senate, Charles L. McNary, of Oregon. McNary, as always on big issues, has put first things first. He is personally dubious of the lease-lend bill. While he may or may not end by voting for the bill itself, he is almost certain to support most of the isolationist amendments. Yet he has told his followers firmly that the first thing to think of is not how to make the loudest row against the President's bill, but how to avoid presenting an appearance of national disunion to the outside world. His is a powerful voice for moderation.

Finally, even the most ardent opponents of the bill seem doubtful of the wisdom of an all-out fight. Not long ago, former President Herbert Hoover turned up in town, and was present at a small men's dinner of Republicans at the house of former Assistant Secretary of State William R. Castle. He deprecated the frontal attack of a demand for a substitute bill—until then the opposition strategy. Instead, he proposed that the Republicans offer certain amendments strong enough to remove all objections to the bill and, incidentally, to make the bill inoperative in many vital respects. Both Senator Taft and House Leader Martin accepted Hoover's proposal, and after the Castle dinner and a talk with McNary about the President's White House conference, Senator Taft even announced that he would "like to vote for the bill" if it could be amended to suit him. This is not the note, quite obviously, on which to make a knock-down, drag-out fight.

ALL OF THIS, of course, does not diminish the probability that the Republican Party in Congress will come out of the lease-lend controversy with an isolationist tag pinned to it. The action of the House Republicans cannot be discounted. Moreover, where there are 8 Senate Republicans on the anti-isolationist side, there are at least 12 true-blue isolationists, and 8 or more with isolationist inclinations. The Senate Republicans may be expected to split nearly two to one for isolation on amendments and then to divide much more evenly in the final vote.

Wendell L. Willkie has done his best to lead his party to a different stand. Unquestionably his declaration for the President's bill prevented the much worse party behavior which some of his enemies hoped for. But while Willkie cannot be said to have carried his party along with him, he and the like-minded Republicans in Congress have at least removed the lease-lend controversy from politics. And this is one of the main reasons why there are other encouraging signs, such as the marked improvement in the general Congressional atmosphere, and the Administration managers' now forecast that they will pass the bill by the end of February, instead of the middle of March.

Lease-Lend Urged

By Ernest Lindley

It Will Never Be Earlier

THE ARGUMENT over the lease-lend bill has taken a queer twist.

Supporters of the bill have been emphasizing the critical importance of the next 60 or so days. They have sketched a dreadful picture of the all-out attack on England which they expect Hitler to launch.

It is apparent, however, that the lease-lend bill, even if it were signed today, could not materially increase our flow of munitions to England during the next 60 days.

LINDLEY

Opponents of the bill are driving hard through this apparent gap in logic. Some are charging or insinuating that Roosevelt wants the bill so he can "give away our Navy." Others are playing on the idea that our aid to England will be—or may be—too late anyway. The implication is: Since the big test of the war is going to come within the next two or three months—before the lease-lend bill can increase our aid to England—why not wait and see what happens?

Obviously, Roosevelt has no intention of "giving away our Navy." If he offered it to the British they couldn't make use of more than a few ships for months to come. They had trouble in mustering enough trained men to take over the 50 destroyers we traded for bases—and they were not ready for the last of these until a few weeks ago.

Moreover, if Roosevelt wished to "give away" the Navy or, to get back to sanity, wished to transfer some more destroyers and perhaps a few cruisers to the British, he could do it without new legislation and without asking the approval of Congress. The destroyer-base deal was never submitted to Congress.

NOBODY in the country has a more possessive feeling about the Navy than Roosevelt has. He has been a Navy "fan" from boyhood, when his ambition, frustrated by his father, was to go to Annapolis. Since college days he has been collecting naval books, pamphlets, records, and prints which now comprise the finest collection of material about the Navy in private hands. He was Assistant Secretary of the Navy during the World War, and when he entered the White House in 1933 he at once began to build up the Navy, until now it is at an all-time peak of efficiency and in fighting power is second to none.

The argument that our increased aid to Britain, under the lease-lend bill, may be too late has more substance. But, as the President has said, it will never be earlier.

No one knows enough to say with confidence whether Hitler can knock out England this spring. The British are pretty confident that he can't.

Some of our own military experts are more doubtful. They believe that, as Gen. Marshall said, the Germans have 36,000 first-line combat planes. They think some of these are the new types which can fly higher than the British pursuit planes can reach. They suspect that the Germans may have some naval surprises in the form of new cruisers of exceptional speed, as well as a vast flock of new submarines. They believe that the Germans are getting set for an attack—on the water, in the air, and later on the land—which will eclipse anything that has yet been seen in destructiveness.

BUT THIS APPRAISAL is not subscribed to by others who also have access to confidential information. One of the highest men in the Government does not believe Hitler can muster the strength, either in the air or on the water, to invade Britain or to bring it down by aerial bombardment or counterblockade.

For every fact that is known there are many uncertainties. But among the known facts are that the British have many more combat planes and pilots than they had last September, and that they have constructed strong and elaborate defenses against invasion.

Even the most profound pessimists in the Government are much less pessimistic than they were last June, July and August, after the fall of the Low Countries and France and the loss of nearly all the British army's modern equipment.

The lease-lend bill, or something like it, is indispensable if our aid to Britain is to be increased over the next four months. A British order for 2,000 planes has been marking time for five weeks.

The reasons why the prompt passage of the bill is important have to do with morale, diplomacy and the military strategy of the British. Without the assurance that supplies will come from this country in increased quantities, the British will have to stop fighting. Their own factories, plus those of the empire and the rest of the non-Axis world, are not a match for Germany's.

To meet the Nazi onslaught, if it comes, the British need a morale of steel. The best stiffener we can provide—apart from the declaration of war, which the British have been told again and again not to expect—is the lease-lend bill. The bill will also bolster the opposition to Hitler throughout Europe, including the conquered countries. Every riot, every uncertainty, in Europe is a drain on Hitler's military strength.

On the military side, the bill also will enable the British to reapportion their strength. Without it they would have to put up the best show possible while they sought peace. When it is passed, they can throw into action more of their first-line strength, especially in the air, with the confidence that equipment will be replaced.

So, even though the lease-lend bill cannot materially increase our aid to Britain during the next 30 or so days, its prompt passage is of the first order of importance.

Nazis Unlikely to Use Gas In Britain, U. S. Experts Say

By Edward T. Folliard

Post Staff Writer

Will the Nazis use poison gas when they launch their expected all-out assault on the British Isles this spring?

Chemical warfare experts here in Washington doubt very much that they will. This doubt is based, not on the idea that Hitler would have any moral scruples, but on the practical argument that the use of gas by one side would bring retaliation from the other.

One of America's foremost authorities on chemical warfare put it this way:

"The best defense against the use of such a weapon as gas is to be prepared to use gas yourself. The British, of course, are prepared. I can't imagine the Germans dropping gas bombs on London, say, as long as the Royal Air Force is able to give Berlin a dose of the same medicine."

If the Germans should knock out the R. A. F. and gain control of English air, he said, it was conceivable that they might use gas to give the tight little isle the coup de grace.

However, other military men have pointed out that if the Germans smash the R. A. F., they won't have much more to worry about in their conquest of England.

The aforementioned expert on chemical warfare was asked about reports that the Germans might have some secret gas that could wipe out whole towns and cities.

"That's the bunk," he said.

He added that the only practicable gases known in warfare are the so-called mustard gas and Lewisite. Both burn the skin and lining of the bronchial tubes.

The expert said that the mortality rate from gas in the World War was much lower than most people realized. In the American Expeditionary Force, he said, only 2 out of every 100 who were gassed died as a result, while in the other Allied armies the rate was only 3 out of every 100. A vast majority of those disabled, he said, ultimately made complete recovery.

"The value of gas to the Germans in the World War," he added, "was in the large number of Allied troops that were disabled. The number was between 700,000 and 800,000. Not only did this break up companies and battalions, but it placed a heavy burden on the medical corps of the Allied armies."

Apart from the danger of retaliation, the expert cited another argument against the use of gas in this war.

"Basically," he said, "gas is not the weapon for the particular type of warfare that is now being waged. The aim in this war is to destroy the enemy's aircraft factories, munitions plants, ships and shipyards. You can't achieve that aim by killing or disabling a few hundred civilians."

He expressed the opinion that casualties would be relatively few among the British if the Germans used gas. The average gas mask, he said, would protect the face and throat, and air-raid shelters would protect those whose clothes were not designed to offset the penetrative effects of gas.

Fair Enough

Letter To Mr. Green

William Green, President,
American Federation of Labor,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Green:

So you and your hoodlum friends now find the pressure so fierce that you are on the point of ordering your 4,000,000-odd members to boycott the newspapers which have been exposing your collaboration with grafters, extortioners and white slavers. So you think these 4,000,000-odd Americans will obey an order to close their eyes to evidence which might convict you in their minds and cause them to kick you out of the job in which you betrayed your trust to the extent of giving the indorsement of your office to men who have preyed upon them. You think they are as docile as that.

Well, go to it, Green, and while you are offering this proposal to your executive council in Miami, including gangster George Browne, whose record you approved in a speech last June, you had better warn all concerned that the racket of preying on American working people in the name of unionism will be all washed up unless you do manage to silence the disclosures.

LISTEN TO ME, Green. You seem to think you can censor the American press by box-office pressure exerted through disciplinary pressure on your 4,000,000-odd members. But you don't know the American citizen or the press very well. These union members, even the most enthusiastic organization men, are going to be suspicious of you, not of the press. They will reckon that if you had the answers you would come clear instead of trying to suppress the facts. The power of your office and influence was given to you to be exercised in their interest, not in the interest of your rich, unioneering friend, Joe Fay, the thug who runs the Operating Engineers and slugged Dave Dubinsky at the New Orleans convention for offering a resolution which would have eliminated him and the corrupt influence of the Frank Hague mob of political and union gangsters.

There was no intention on the part of the workers that their president should certify the good character of a criminal of the Nitti-Capone mob who was even then operating one of your big international unions on a percentage basis in combination with some of the most notorious gangsters in the country.

You have offered that autonomy stall of yours too often, Green, and even though you may not have the autocratic power to kick out known criminals, you certainly have the power to discredit such rodents and help their victims kick them out.

Answer this, Green: You are now full of initiative to censor the press without any special warrant in the terms governing your office, but when did you ever exert yourself to the same extent or to any extent to decontaminate the American Federation of Labor?

GREEN, these disclosures haven't even scratched the surface. For instance, do you think the public knows that Fay's Operating Engineers were given a Hitler ballot to vote when they held their so-called election of international officers last July on which there was named for each office only one candidate, with no opposition?

Do you call that a democratic election, Green, and do you think the engineers who have been tossed around by the officers of their union, bled of their money when they could get work and compelled to contribute "substantial checks" to their officers in token of their love and esteem, will obey your boycott?

I don't know, Green. Maybe you and the mob can burn them with fines, suspensions and other discipline for reading disapproved papers and patronizing goods advertised therein to such an extent that they will be afraid to look at the truth. But if they do obey your suggestion that will just mean that thuggery, thievery and racketeering in its many ingenious forms will have won absolute approval in the American Federation of Labor. It will mean that henceforth the rule of the gorilla will be beyond challenge by the press or the rank and file.

So go to it, Green, and while you are conferring with your gangster pal, Browne, down there in Miami amid the criminal scum, you can tip off your friend Moreschi, of the Common Laborers, who hasn't held an election in 31 years, and never tells the poor chumps what becomes of their sweaty money, that, come boycott or what the hell, he hasn't heard nothing yet. Tell him that, Green.

Yours truly,
WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Germany Prepares To Attack

NOVER

IN MAKING her preparations for an all-out attack on Great Britain in the not-too-distant future, Germany is not forgetting the fact that the English Channel constitutes only one front, albeit the most crucial, in a war spread over three continents.

That is why Hitler's hand can be detected in such seemingly unrelated developments as the recent undeclared war between Thailand and French Indo-China and the Japanese-sponsored armistice which brought it to an end; the clamor of the Nazi-controlled press in Paris against the Vichy government; civil strife in Rumania; and the infiltration of German troops and Gestapo agents into Italy.

GERMANY'S chances of a speedy victory would obviously be enhanced if, when the assault on Great Britain begins, the latter's forces continue to be divided while Germany's full strength can be hurled against the enemy.

To achieve this double aim it is essential, from Hitler's point of view, to prevent the British from winning so speedy a triumph over the hapless Italians that British sea power can be diverted from the Mediterranean to the home sector and air and military power from Africa to the European continent. The Fuehrer has also found it wise to do all in his power to direct Japanese ambitions southward in the hope that this would lead to a Japanese-American clash, and effect of which would be to prevent this Nation from rendering large-scale assistance to Great Britain.

ORIGINALLY Italy's role in Axis military strategy was to be that of cutting blade in the shears that were to sever British communications in the Mediterranean. That blade is broken. An Italian attack on Alexandria and the Suez Canal is no longer even a remote possibility. What is far more likely is the collapse of the Italian war effort in Africa.

To prevent the collapse from becoming complete — something that would have extremely unpleasant consequences for the Third Reich—Germany has been forced to divert part of its air strength to the Mediterranean. That has not prevented the British from continuing their triumphal progress in Libya. Hitler now faces the alternative of sending more planes and pilots to the southern theater of war or securing a new ally in the Mediterranean and Africa.

THE FIRST COURSE might involve risks of dividing Germany's strength in such a way as to make it impossible to carry out a successful assault on Great Britain. Hitler has, therefore, put an increasing amount of pressure on the Vichy government to make it a willing or unwilling ally of the Axis. To be sure, Marshal Petain stands in the way. And there is also a risk that if too great pressure is exerted on Vichy, French North Africa might rise in rebellion. But if the Vichy government can, step by step, be led into the kind of "collaboration" with Germany which Hitler desires, Petain's opposition might lose its force and the danger of a North African uprising be reduced to a minimum.

For these reasons, Laval is being pushed forward by Berlin as a man whose presence in the Vichy government is indispensable if good relations between Germany and France are to be maintained. Once Hitler's men are in control of the key positions in the Vichy regime ways may be found of circumventing the objections of the aged marshal to the use of France as Germany's catspaw. Petain might continue to be loaded with honors while progressively being deprived of authority. He might even be got rid of once it became safe to do so. Hitler has never scrupled about means to achieve his ends.

So it would be wise to watch what happens to Laval. That should provide the key to the future role of Vichy in the Axis scheme of things.

IN THE FAR EAST, Vichy has for some time been forced to play Hitler's game. It was German pressure on Vichy which led the authorities of French Indo-China to agree to the Japanese demands for the use of the colony as a base of operations against China. And Germany and Japan egged on Thailand to embark on its aggressive course, as suicidal a policy, from a long-run point of view, as could be imagined. For this struggle ultimately enabled Japan to intervene and play the role of peacemaker. She may now assume the role of peace preserver. That will mean effective Japanese occupation of strategic areas in both countries and will give the island empire jumping-off points for an ultimate attack on the Malay Peninsula, Singapore and the Dutch East Indies.

The Japanese are anything but averse to an expansion of their domain to the south. Japan, wrote Admiral Nobumasa Suyetsugu in a recent magazine article, "must establish a sphere of common prosperity in Greater East Asia. For this purpose the Dutch East Indies must be asked to join the sphere. We have a right . . . to ask them for the supply of materials needed for our common prosperity and existence . . . There is no cause for hesitation."

This is one of many similar Japanese expressions of what the island's policy ought to be in the South Seas. Nor is Admiral Suyetsugu alone in arguing that Japanese hegemony over the Dutch colonies is necessary to make certain Japan's victory in a war with the United States.

It is doubtful, however, whether, despite pressure and encouragement from Berlin, Japan would be prepared to launch an all-out attack on the Dutch colonies, one, moreover, timed to coincide with a German assault on Britain, if the United States adopts a strong and fearless policy in the Far East. Were such a policy carried out there is every reason to believe that the accent in Tokyo would be caution. In any event we cannot for a moment forget, any more than Hitler forgets, that the wars in Europe, Africa and Asia are not separate wars but the same war, a fact which the aggressors proclaimed to the world when they made their tripartite pact last September.

ASCAP Faces Criminal Action By U. S. Today in Milwaukee

As last-minute negotiations failed, the Justice Department stated last night that criminal proceedings will be started against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in United States District Court at Milwaukee today.

The Justice Department on Monday gave ASCAP 48 hours of grace in the hope that an accord could be reached, and on Monday night the ASCAP directors decided in New York to call in a body of Justice attorneys.

The directors failed to appear in Washington yesterday, however, and the antitrust division said that the case would go to court as planned.

The filing of the charges does not preclude the possibility that a consent decree may be signed, though, as was done a week ago with the radio interests.

Broadcast Music, Inc., has agreed to refrain from certain "monopolistic practices" stipulated by the Justice Department, and the latter has withdrawn its threat to include BMI, the National Association of Broadcasters, the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia Broadcasting System in the antitrust proceedings. The BMI consent decree does not become operative, however, until ASCAP agrees to similar terms.

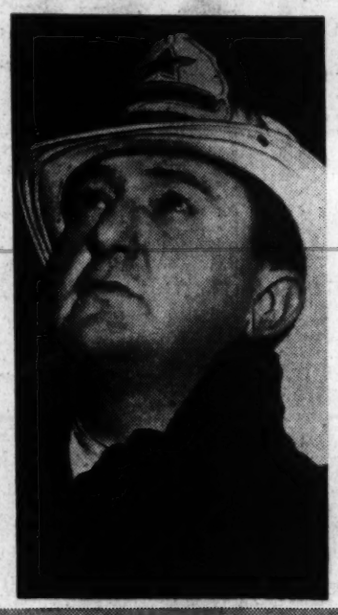
Four-Alarm Fire at St. Elizabeths

1. FLAMES ROAR through the 1½-story frame Red Cross recreation building, built at St. Elizabeths Hospital during the first World War. At 12:29 a. m. yesterday the first of four alarms was sounded bringing scores of firemen to fight the blaze

2. CAME THE DAWN and charred ruins were all that remained of the Red Cross building. Damage was estimated at more than $15,000. The blaze, visible in the early hours throughout Southeast Washington, attracted hundreds of spectators



3. FIRST CRY OF ALARM was raised in the hospital grounds by Theodore Pfeiffer (left), a mail carrier, who passed the smoking building while delivering special-delivery letters. Missionary Finds America's Smugness Gone; Sees People 'Confused, Wanting Some Answer'

"America's smugness and complacency of four years ago are gone . . . — "People are confused and wanting some answer . . . — "The situation has given the National Christian Mission opportunities such it could not have had otherwise . . . — "We've never had such an open reception by young people . . ."

From a little settlement in India which is "a miniature Kingdom of God," Dr. E. Stanley Jones, one of the world's most noted missionaries, has plunged into a top-speed American hustle—making an average of three talks a day for 22 weeks on a continental tour.

As one of the leaders of the National Christian Mission which is in Washington this week, the gray-haired missionary with the earnest manner and the twinkling eyes has drawn great crowds with his messages. But his platform manner is as simple and direct as the conversational tone which he took yesterday when he gave a before-breakfast interview at the home of a friend.

In contrast with the turmoil among nations today, Dr. Jones told simply of the group fellowship in the ashram—the little center which he has founded in Lucknow, India, and where he lives.

"The 30 persons, of many races and classes, live together, and the household is operated by a common fund," Dr. Jones said. "There are high caste Indians—and outcasts. Persons from Chinese Turkestan, Ceylon, England, Denmark, America, Australia and other countries. They go out to minister to the people in the vicinity—in health work, in reducing illiteracy and in other needs.

"By living together in fellowship, we hope to demonstrate what we mean when we talk about the Kingdom of God. We hope not to give the answer but to BE the answer!"

Then he turned to the American scene.

at the age of 23, in 1907, just before he sailed for India as a missionary

"We've never had such an open reception from young people," he commented. "They're gun-shy in the beginning, until they begin to see what it's all about. Then the response is remarkable.

"For instance, I visited a college noted for its toughness. In fact, it has cultivated toughness, and specialized in putting the fear of God into its football enemies. At a meeting there, practically the whole student body stayed for the after-meeting which was for 'personal finding.'

"I don't think that would have happened two years ago," Dr. Jones added.

Dr. Jones told of an incident which, he said, "epitomized one of the discouraging things about America."

"In another city at the opening meeting of the National Christian Mission, the chairman said he hoped the city would have a Pentecost. At the same time, on the speaker's table there lay a rabbit's foot which had been sent up by someone wishing luck to the meeting.

"I said that I was afraid this was symbolic of a good deal of thinking in America," he said. "We still believe in Pentecost, and we still believe in rabbit's feet. There is a high spirituality bound up with immature economic and social and international viewpoints. We've developed a pagan attitude along with a great deal of Christianity. We must Christianize those pagan areas."

Yet he finds a great change in the United States since his other visits in recent years.

"The smugness and complacency of four years ago—even of two years ago—are gone. People are 'plowed up' and susceptible, very shaken, and many of them are confused and wanting some answer.

"Of course, we don't fool ourselves. 'When the devil was sick, the devil a saint would be.' But at any rate the situation has given the National Christian Mission opportunities such as it could not have had under other circumstances."

The 57-year-old missionary, who was born near Baltimore, left this country many years ago for foreign fields. He has served as evangelist to the high castes of India since 1907, and has done much to encourage new opportunities and new status for the down-trodden. He was elected a Methodist bishop in 1928, but resigned to continue as a missionary.

"If the authoritative voice of the church would speak out, this country wouldn't be drifting so fatalistically toward war," he said at another point in the interview. "Too often the church has taken its cue from circumstances rather than from its own gospels.

"The business of the church is to set up tensions between its standards and those of the state and surrounding life. If it doesn't do that, it fails."

Claiming that he had almost forgotten he hadn't had breakfast, Dr. Jones was then summoned to it. Against his three-a-day speaking schedule, he has been nursing a cold at the home of Dr. O. G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church.

Sculptor Berti Attends City's Famous Statues

The man who repairs Washington's world-famed statues, who last summer performed a plastic stone surgery operation on Abraham Lincoln's figure in the Memorial and who probably has a better working knowledge of District monuments than any other man in the city, is a 57-year-old Italian sculptor, Albert P. Berti, of 1531 P Street Northwest.

Berti has been the District's official monument repair man since he attracted the attention of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission five years ago by expertly replacing a finger on the statue of Lincoln in Judiciary Square.

He has replaced a hand on the Dupont Circle monument, repaired hundred of cracks in statues of national heroes and cleaned innumerable generals behind the ears with compressed air and a rasp file.

Berti thinks his job is "very, very fine—it keeps you interested, you know, and beside, it's out-of-doors, and I like that." He received his training back in the "old country"—in an art school in Italy, which he attended until he was 19. Until he was 27 he had a studio in Italy. Then he came to America.

One of the most difficult and exacting jobs the stone artist ever had was repair work on the Lincoln Memorial statue. It is constructed not of one, but 28 separate pieces of stone fitted together, and occasionally cracks appear where the stones have settled. His job was to refill the cracks and clean the famous stone countenance.

Bangs and Earrings Aid To Changed Personality

By Carolyn Abbott

TIRED of struggling with pompadours that won't stay put? Weary of exposed foreheads that look as bare and as unbecoming as a denuded celery stalk? If so, take heart for bangs are here—a 1941 spring style.

You can have your bangs fluffy, frizzed, straight or rounded. The newest way is have your "bangs coiffure" rounded to complement the "rounded shoulders" look of the new spring costumes. But bangs you will have, if you follow fashion's latest command. Also you'll rejoice in the return of the flattering chignon at the nape. Besides bangs, you'll wear earrings. Not any old gewgaws, but earrings that will harmonize with your coiffure and flatter the contour of your face.

Here are a few points to consider before converting your pompadour to bangs. If your face is too round, don't try bangs—they will make your face more round looking. Don't wear bangs if your forehead is low. Or if you try them, do get a good hair stylist to trim them so you can get the best results for your type of face.

Bangs Can Be Boon

Bangs, however, are a boon to you if you have a long, narrow face or a high forehead. A neat fringe of bangs will add just the right coquettish, flippant look to a face that is too prim and sober looking.

Whatever type you are, remember to keep your bangs neatly brushed and combed—otherwise, you'll look downright frowsy and unkempt.

Bangs provide a good framework for earrings. Remember, however, earrings are not just ornaments—they're artists' tools, with which, if you're understanding, you can emphasize or subdue the contour of your cheek bones and chin.

Here are a few simple rules to follow when buying earrings: If you have a long, slender face, wear large round or button earrings—large as your face will allow. They will add inches (almost) to your cheeks and do away with the peeled look which the pompadour may have given you . . .

If your face is round, follow the opposite rule. Daytime earrings don't dangle this year, but you can find long ones that silhouette the entire contour of your ear and contribute to making you look interesting instead of chubby.

If your face is oval (you're the lucky one) you can wear almost any type of earrings. Only be sure that they're the correct size to encourage and not dwarf your features.

Dozens of other suggestions include smart little arrow heads to fine down a square jaw; modernistic little rectangles to square too round a face.

Fragile stork earrings and an afternoon version of the "American Beauty Bang" coiffure, created by Josef of Mona Manet's, harmonize with delicate features of girl at right. Heavy earrings overshadow delicate features

Flower earrings worn by model (left) break too long a neckline and give illusion of width to a thin, sharp face. The bangs in front and soft chignon caught with barette in back round off thin, pointed features

Long earrings, similar to those worn by model at left, give length to round, chubby faces and create interesting shadows and hollows over cheek bones. Josef's casual bang coiffure for sports is one of the season's newest hair trends

Don't Overlook Your Vitamins In Daily Diet

By Ida Jean Kain

A new and highly concentrated vitamin capsule is being sent undernourished children of France and England. Dr. Norman Jolliffe, chairman of the medical advisory committee of the British-American Corps, estimates that these tablets, in sufficient quantity a year, will keep 4,000,000 children healthy.

I wish it were possible for all the children and adults, too, in the war-torn countries to receive these magic pellets. In wartimes, the foods which are the most greatly curtailed are those which supply the vitamins—the fresh fruits, fresh vegetables, dairy products, and whole grains.

Vita means life and the name shows how important vitamins are. Their nutritional role is that of coordinator. Most of you know that calories are the measure of the energy or fuel value of a food. The vitamins do not furnish energy or building material—they act with the calories in a regulatory role and are necessary to the release of energy. They make for the smooth bodily functioning we call health.

As long as you have stored fat you can get along without your full requirement of calories, but when you have no effective reserve of vitamins. If you do not get enough in your daily diet the result is a disturbed functioning, for the body cannot make vitamins.

The brilliant work of research chemists has made it possible to obtain in concentrated form the vitamins furnished in food. Some of these concentrates are derived from rich food sources. Others are prepared in laboratories and are the exact duplicates of the vitamins in foods. By separating the vitamins from the foods the scientists have made it possible for them to be sold in concentrated form.

Slip Covers Made Easily

TIRED of dull wintry rooms? Cheery new slip covers will bring a foretaste of spring right into your home. And, easily and inexpensively, you can make yourself the smart covers interior decorators are featuring these days.

Unusually attractive is a cotton crash cover, a bright blue with white cord trim and a double row of fringe around the bottom. And of course you can ring your own changes on the color scheme, using yellow with green trim, old rose with brown.

The trick in covering any type of chair is to pin your fabric directly over the old upholstery, taking the chair itself as your pattern.

Just remove the cushion and begin by smoothing fabric down front of back and over seat, being sure your material is wrong-side out for cord trim. To relieve strain between back and seat, allow a 4-inch tuck-in as the diagram shows. Then pin along lines of the upholstery and cut 1½ inches outside pins for seams.

By the same system you fit arms, sides and back, allowing an extra 2 or 3 inches to tuck in where each arm joins the seat. Pin the sections together and now you're ready to remove your cover and baste.

So easily the job goes and so lovely the cover looks when it's finished—you'll want your whole living room to blossom out, with gray slip covers for sofas, side chairs.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Working Girl's Friend

IF YOU ARE one of those office hacks whose time is spent telling colleagues how to spell "separate" and being gracious to loafers, adhesive friends and public pests, take hope. Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey is going to do something about it.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The intrepid president of the Do Something About It League announced at her press conference yesterday that she was drawing up a code of office etiquette for the protection of business women.

"It is simply outrageous," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "that employed women should remain the victims of etiquette for any boss to call makes them the prey of all the idle and the lazy, both within their offices and out. Now take the average man worker in an office. Nobody thinks of interrupting him, visiting him, borrowing from him or even going near him when he is glowering over his work. But no matter how busy a woman may be, she must function as a dictionary, an encyclopedia, a telephone directory and a bureau of information to all who pass her way. In addition, she must be a perpetual hostess ready to smile and chat with every person who has any time to waste.

Fancy Executives Not Included

"I am, of course, not referring to the high-powered woman executive in a fancy office who surrounds herself with the pomp of an Oriental potentate and who spends most of her time at 'contact' luncheons and cocktails while lines of patient wretches wait in her office to see her. I am speaking of the average working woman who has to turn out a good day's work while being constantly badgered by her colleagues, her idle friends and the public.

"The whole system is based on discrimination against women," continued Mrs. DeGoofey. "Take the out-of-town sightseers. What do they do the moment they arrive? Why, get on the telephone and call whatever employed woman they know. Or, worse still, they barge in on her unannounced when she is probably looking her most harried. Would they think of doing such a thing to a man? They would NOT.

"Then there are the working woman's chummy idle friends in town. What do they do but drop by to visit with her—usually without warning? Now I have been campaigning for years against the surprise visitor in the home, and I think he—or rather she—is an even greater menace in an office. In fact nobody over 6 years old ever wants to be surprised about anything and certainly a woman with a shiny nose does not."

Mrs. DeGoofey took from her large reticule a memorandum containing a list of general rules to be the basis for a code of office etiquette.

Bill of Rights For Harried Femmes

"First of all," she said, "I would make it a distinct breach of etiquette for any boss to call a woman employe for dictation or conference without giving her at least 5 minutes in which to powder her nose and fix her permanent.

"Second, no employed woman should ever be called on the telephone at her office and nagged to serve on a committee, attend a lecture, buy tickets to a benefit, or do her public 'duty' in any other way, shape or form.

"Third, no hostess should expect a working woman, any more than a working man, to drop her duties to attend a private luncheon, cocktail or bridge party.

"Fourth, no business woman should be expected to 'pick up something downtown' on her noon hour for anybody living in the suburbs or anywhere else.

"Fifth, she should not be interrupted when busy to give advice or information to anybody, and she should not be expected to present a 'won't you have some tea?' expression to all passersby.

"Sixth, she should not be cast in the role of official hostess to all the bores, leeches, screwballs, loafers, salesmen and visitors who invade the office."

"May I have a copy of those regulations, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a press association reporter.

"Copies for the press will be available in a few hours," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "I am going to have a little friend of mine who works in an office run them off on the typewriter in her spare time."

Granted Driver's License and Use of New Car, Boy of 16 Becomes Social Favorite; Stays Out Until 2 and 3 A. M.; His Mother Worries

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband died less than a year ago and I find myself a bit defuddled in coping with my 16-year-old son. Shortly after his father's death, I permitted this boy to get a driver's license. He is a level-headed, responsible boy and it has been a great help to me to have him drive. He likes driving and is always willing to run errands, etc. However, all is not rosy.

The car is a new model and a good one,—so my son is enjoying a wave of great popularity. He is a junior in high school and has recently joined a small fraternity. This involves "dating," which is normal, and I am glad to let him use the car occasionally on weekends. But the hours these children keep!

The girls are nice girls and come from nice homes. So do the boys. They "date" in groups, come to our house often and go to the other homes as well. Occasionally there are dances. All parties, big or little, end at the Hot Shoppe. That, too, is all right,—if only they wouldn't stay until the morning hours! On Friday and Saturday nights, my son never gets in before 2 a. m., and last Saturday night it was 3 a. m., following a dance. One of the girls in this crowd is only 14, and I can't help wondering where her mother is. She certainly isn't on her job.

I have a 21-year-old daughter, who is now self-supporting and her own mistress. She has lots of dates, but when she is out until 2 o'clock, on an aimless jaunt, I still want to know where she has been, and why. I know my children's morals are sound; but I also know that this "night life" is bound to be demoralizing.

I have set 1 o'clock as the zero hour for the car to be in the garage, henceforth. My son thinks I am being unfair and that he will "lose face" with his crowd. What do you think? Don't you think these girls and their mothers should likewise see the reason and value of a 1 o'clock curfew? Or am I being archaic?

WORRIED MOTHER.

Pointless Night Prowling Worse Than 'Late Hours'

DEAR W. M.: Four young gentlemen of my acquaintance—ranging in ages from 21 to 26—favored me with a serious round-table discussion of your questions. Their consensus view is this: The lateness of the hour should give less concern than illogical or unpredictable irregularity in the matter of getting home after midnight.

For instance, they said, if young people are going in a group—and the chaperone-value of groups was stressed—to a party or dance which is scheduled from 9 to 1, or 10 until 2, there should be an honor-binding understanding between parents and son (or daughter) that the latter will be home within an hour after the dance (or party) has "broken up." If, for any reason, the youngster is unavoidably delayed coming home—or anticipates such a possibility—he should "check in" with his parents by telephone, saying where he is, why he is detained, and when to expect him.

Two members of my "panel"—one aged 21, the other 26—said they follow such a practice to this day, having developed it in their teens, out of consideration for their parents' feelings. On going out at night, they say where they are going and approximately when they expect to return. To prevent parental worry, they telephone any subsequent change of plan. A third young man, aged 24, said he has "never thought of that; but it seemed a good idea." He also said that he knew he could expect an annoyed reaction from his parents, if and when he came in "around 3 a. m., for no particular reason." He cheerfully conceded the validity of their annoyance and added: "Now that I think it over, I believe I'll turn over a new leaf and get in earlier. There's no percentage in staying out all hours."

These four young men are economically self-supporting and socially self-governing. They are conventional in their attitude toward "hours," and conservative in their social habits. Therefore, it is interesting to note that they believe your proposed inflexible 1 a. m. curfew is an unfeasible regulation. Suppose—they argued—your son were going to a dance that wouldn't "break up" until 1 a. m. To get home by your "zero hour," he would have to make his exit when the affair was in full swing—thus inconveniencing others he had brought, either by leaving them behind or dragging them prematurely away.

Would it not be better, they asked, to give him the responsibility of "using his head"—by requiring him to be home by 2 a. m.? This gives him an hour's grace for a snack at the Hot Shoppe and to deliver his girl and other passengers to their homes. It may crowd him. There may be no time for leisurely loafing at the Hot Shoppe; no time for cruising through the park. He may have to swallow his sandwich or pancakes whole—but such incidental discomforts are an inseparable part of getting along in this world; a lesson-from-life in the personal inconvenience of adapting to certain higher authorities' requirements of him (and a lesson that cannot be learned too early).

For my part, I find the general "sense" of these young men's views reasonable enough. If your son is—as you say—"a level-headed, responsible boy," both of you probably would profit by the exercise of mutual consideration; rather more than from the employment, on your part, of nervous "crack-down" methods.

This is not to say, however, that you—as the really responsible party in the relationship—haven't the inalienable right to require of him whatever conduct mature wisdom decrees as best, in the light of his circumstances and present associates. Frankly, I think he would be a better man, in years to come, through learning, now, to toe the mark set by an essentially just, even if somewhat strict, parent—than he would be if allowed to run foolishly at large during adolescence, just in order to "keep face" with a miscellaneous assortment of teen-age pleasure seekers.

Cupboard Still Basic Piece Of Furniture

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Next to the chest itself, the cupboard may be regarded as the most basic piece of furniture, for very early in the story of man's domestication the accumulation of "things" necessitated provision for storage space. In early colonial days—and in many countries to this day—the cupboard was the chief and often the only piece of furniture in a room (in Korea this is still the case). Remembering that there were no closets till fairly modern days, you can appreciate what cupboards would mean in the housekeeping pattern.

The simplest colonial cupboards were crudely built of pine with open shelves for pewter and dishes and a closed section below for food. The more prosperous colonists imported fine cupboards from Europe, an important type of these being the press cupboard, an oak two-tiered affair without open shelves, ornately carved, massive. Later, with the dawn of the eighteenth century came the less cumbersome and more charming built-in corner cupboard. Usually of pine, these were designed as a part of the panelling of the room, with beautiful detail, often a shell or sunburst design at the top and sometimes with colonade effects. Open shelves for beloved treasures were made in curving shapes with extra delightfully contrived little projections. These were finished in paint or in stain and wax. Later they were made as separate pieces of furniture.

Breadcrumb Dumplings Easy on the Pocketbook

THERE'S no need to forego a fresh loaf of bread, just because you still have a few slices in your bread box. For you can use up those leftovers in dozens of different breadcrumb recipes.

For instance, the next time you serve stew, dress it up with breadcrumb dumplings. You'll have a good cold-weather dish, at low cost, too. Make the dumplings tiny for daintier appearance—they'll triple in size anyhow before they're cooked through. The following recipe makes 24 dumplings.

Pearly Teeth Misnomer

Hollywood, Calif.—In Pere Westmore's own words, the teeth of some of the loveliest ladies are not all like strings of pearls, contrary to what poetic fancy might like to say about them. Perc says the natural tinge of perfect teeth may be grayish or off-white as well as a "pearly white" and that lip rouge should be chosen to flatter this tinge as well as to blend with a girl's skin tones.

800 Senators, Representatives and Wives Forget Politics At the Gayest Reception at White House This Season

By Hope Ridings Miller

"Well, now, this IS a party!" said a portly gentleman as he surveyed the gala throng of Senators, Representatives and their wives assembled at the White House last night. The event was the annual reception honoring members of Congress; and the gentleman in question was one of 800 guests who shook hands with President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Gayest of the annual State functions thus far this season, it swung merrily along as if everybody in the company was of one accord on any issue you might mention.

Wreathed in smiles were the stars of the evening—Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley and Representative Joe Martin, each of whom had scores clustered around them during the entire party.

Conspicuous by their absence, however, were a number of Congressional solons whose names have hit the headlines regularly the last few weeks. Senator Burton K. Wheeler, back in town after a Florida sojourn, passed up the White House party, as did Mrs. Wheeler. Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark were among those missing; as were Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg and Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish.

Senator and Mrs. Robert A. Taft, however, were there in fine form, and came in for plenty of attention; as did Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Senator and Mrs. Gerald Nye and Senator Arthur Capper.

So far as I know, the Congressional reception has never chalked up any special honors as an all-out "dress" affair. It is the only formal White House function at which black-ties are generously sprinkled among the white; and a couple of business suits were also glimpsed in last night's throng.

CONGRESSIONAL hostesses, however, were turned out in their flossiest finery down to the last lady in the crowd, and I must say that as a whole they were much more smartly attired than the same group in former years. Orchid corsages set off many an ensemble; cover-up frocks were more in evidence than low-cut gowns, and some of the handsomest outfits I have seen this year were among those on parade.

While an atmosphere of old-home week prevailed and everybody seemed to be having the time of his life, some of the top-flight guests had one eye on the clock a good part of the time.

"I've got to be getting away from here," said Joe Martin. "Got three more evening parties here this week and the Lamb's Club dinner in New York on Saturday. Must have some rest."

"I've already told Wallace that I can't wait for him to leave this time," said Sam Rayburn, as he waved goodby and started for the door. But getting away was more of a problem than he anticipated. At his first White House party since he has been Speaker, he couldn't take a step without being stopped by friends. Standing at one end of the drawing room with his handsome sister, Miss Lucinda Rayburn, the Texan had Senators and Representatives three-deep around him all evening.

MISS RAYBURN, who wore a black marquisette frock, appliqued in white, was enjoying her first White House reception and meeting virtually everybody present. (She has decided to stay on in Washington another week before returning to her Texas home.)

The reception procedure followed the usual pattern down to the last notch. The scarlet-coated Marine Band Orchestra played in the lobby during the first half of the party, and then gave over the spotlight to the Navy Orchestra, which went into action for dancing in the East Room.

Shortly after 9 o'clock, the band struck up the familiar notes of "Hail to the Chief," and the President, Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the Cabinet walked in from the State Dining Room and on to the Red Room. From there, the Chief Executive and the First Lady went on to the Blue Room, where they received. Mrs. Roosevelt wore that handsome new cream satin frock—one of her Inaugural Week gowns—fashioned on flowing lines with a sweeping train and a delicate trimming of seed pearls on the sleeves and neckline.

A SOMEWHAT depleted Cabinet line was in the procession. Missing were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull. She is still convalescing. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau is enjoying a brief vacation in Arizona, but Mrs. Morgenthau was there, wearing black and silver lame, accented with touches of red velvet.

Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson were next in line. She wore bouffant black taffeta, a perfect foil for her magnificent diamonds. The Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson were there. Her black net frock was set off with a huge cluster of white orchids, worn at the waistline.

Also on hand for the party were the Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker, the latter in handsome gold brocade, and the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, the latter wearing a marine-blue crepe frock with cap sleeves, the shoulders as well as the pockets, embroidered in gold. Living up to her reputation of being one of the best-dressed women in the Cabinet contingent, Mrs. Jesse Jones wore white crepe with a short jacket edged in rhinestones. She accompanied her husband, the Secretary of Commerce.

THREADING HIS WAY through the crowd in the state dining room was Senator Tom Conally. On his arm was Miss Lena Belle High, a pretty brunette, wearing a black lace frock. Senator and Mrs. Alexander Wiley tried out the bright pink punch.

Mrs. James H. Hughes, wife of the Senator from Delaware, chatted with a group. Her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Hughes, 3d, had come down from Philadelphia for the reception. She wore an ecru taffeta frock and a cluster of red camellias. Also in the group were Mrs. Hughes' son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. John P. Martin who make their home near Dover, Del.

Perhaps the handsomest couple in the entire assemblage were Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge. She wore a red wool jacket, embroidered in gold, over her black gown.

Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney were accompanied by their niece, Miss Agnes Doherty. Senator Walter F. George, now in the headlines as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was accompanied by his wife. She wore a red crepe gown fashioned with a tight bodice and full skirt.

SENATOR AND MRS. John H. Bankhead 2d, of Alabama, were there the latter dressed in black velvet brightened with touches of red. Also among those present were Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, she in pale blue chiffon with a jacket of delicate brown lace. Mrs. Morris Sheppard was a temporary widow, her husband having been obliged to remain at home. Also a widow for the evening was Mrs. Sol Bloom. She was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom. They described their frocks to friends as being "Defense blue" and "Treasury gold," respectively.

Senator Hattie Caraway wore black velvet. Among the five women Representatives was Mrs. Margaret Smith, who chose a striking white crepe frock trimmed with fur.

Senator and Mrs. Josh Lee were there; also Senator and Mrs. Lister Hill, the latter wearing a becoming frock of powder blue crepe, fashioned on simple lines. Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Duncan were among those present, as were Representative and Mrs. Thomas F. Ford, Representative A. J. Sabath accompanied by his niece, Miss Pearl Pribyl, of Chicago.

ONE OF THE prettiest frocks at the party was worn by Mrs. Carter Glass, who looked like a Dresden figurine in bouffant powder blue marquisette with a wide band of appliqued satin flowers on the skirt.

Many "new faces" added a fillip of interest to the gathering. Senator and Mrs. Harold Burton chatted with Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey, and the four were soon joined by the new Senator from Maine and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, the latter of whom wore a handsome black frock, trimmed in rhinestones.

Mrs. Thomas Eliot, whose husband is one of the youngest of the new members of the House, came back from a brief stay in New York to attend the party. She was gowned in gold brocade, and was telling friends that she and her husband have taken a house for the season on Seminary Hill in Alexandria.

"We've lost our wives somewhere in the crowd," said Representative Eugene Worley and Representative Clinton P. Anderson. I don't know whether the latter ever found his wife, but I saw the former making his way to attractive Mrs. Worley, who was smartly turned out in white crepe, splashed with gold sequins.

THE NEW Senator from Indiana, Raymond Willis, was there with Mrs. Willis, and Representative and Mrs. William S. Hill of Colorado were there; also Representative and Mrs. John J. McIntyre of Wyoming.

Only once was the even tenor of the reception interrupted and then for only a moment. That was toward the latter part of the event when Representative Mary T. Norton almost fainted. Someone standing nearby noticed that she was pale and saw her sway slightly. A White House aide summoned Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire just in time. Mrs. Norton was taken out of the crowd; and a few minutes later was on her way home in a White House car.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

A FRENCHMAN and a Mexican had to go all the way down into the Virginia countryside to discover that they had both attended the same school years ago in France. Dining with Miss Charlotte Noland near Middleburg the other night conversation was general and Don Luis Quintanilla, Minister Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, and Baron James Baeyens, of the French Embassy, were chatting across the candlelit table.

Suddenly the two diplomats discovered that their school days had been passed in the same treadmill, though at different epochs, and it was, "Do you remember old so-and-so?" There followed a very interesting comparison of European and American education with Miss Noland giving us some amusing sidelights on old-fashioned and modern methods.

AFTER A delicious dinner of baked Potomac rock fish, caught by the captain of Miss Noland's little boat, the Sea Fox, and quail, shot by our hostess on a recent trip to North Carolina, we adjourned to the halls of learning and listened to a delightful talk on "Pan-Americanism," by Don Luis Quintanilla.

The Foxcroft girls were all wreathed in smiles because of the success of their dramatic club's presentation of "Outward Bound." Former Ambassador William C. Bullitt, whose daughter, Anne, is president of the club, had attended the performance. He had been so much moved by the play's rendition that he had described it in detail to Mrs. Roosevelt.

The First Lady, in turn, had complimented Miss Noland on the play, when she saw the headmistress of Foxcroft at Mrs. Jesse Jones' luncheon. It is no wonder that the young actresses were enchanted to hear that their fame had traveled so far and so high.

At a small tea party in Georgetown the other afternoon the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Nevile Butler arrived with their house guest, Lady Margaret Barry. Slender and petite, Lady Margaret must be a veritable lion of strength, a British lion, of course. She is taking care of 17 English children up on Long Island, six of them her own. The faces of the other guests when they heard this were quite a study. They all admired Lady Margaret but no one asked to change jobs with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Hallett Johnson were in fine spirits because their household goods and chattels have arrived safely from Spain after being in Madrid during the whole war. They are optimistically hoping to be settled in their new house on R Street this week. Also present was Mrs. Rowley Byers, cousin of Senator Warren Barbour and the Barbours "war guest, who said that handsome Mrs. Barbour is in Florida for needed vacation after coping with flu in the family.

Others were the Argentine Ambassador, whose wife is also in Florida; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, the Snowden Fahenstocks, Rudolf Schoenfeld, First Secretary of the United States Embassy in London, who is home on leave but will soon be returning to his post, and Ronald Lyman, of Boston, who has come to Washington to work in the Navy Department.

IF LETTERS going from Washington to Tokio in the diplomatic pouch of the Australian Legation arrive covered with ink stains it will be the fault of the Australian Counselor in Tokio, Keith Officer. Mr. Officer asked for the ink and he is going to get it, either in the bottle or out of it. It seems that Mr. Officer is quite happy in Tokio, but that he misses Washington is shown by certain requests in his letters to friends here. One letter asked for toothpaste, another one for razorblades, and this last one for ink. Life in Washington certainly has its problems but evidently they are quite different from those encountered in Japan.

Party Honors Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt was guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday given by Mrs. Frank Walker, wife of the Postmaster General, at the Carlton Hotel.

Guests included Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, Mrs. Robert Jackson, Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mrs. Claude Wickard, Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Ross McIntire, Mrs. Stephen Early, Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. James Helm, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. George Dern, Miss Ida Guffey, Miss Lucinda Rayburn; Miss Malvina Thompson, Mrs. Edward Flynn and Mrs. Frank Boucher, mother of Mrs. Walker.

Dorothy Porter And Fiance Feted On Eve of Wedding

Miss Dorothy Porter and David Rinehart Stauffer, whose wedding will take place at the Wardman Park Hotel today, were guests in whose honor the bride-elect's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Porter, entertained at dinner last evening at their home on Broad Branch Road.

Only members of the family will witness the wedding, which will take place in the apartment of the bride's parents, Interstate Commerce Commissioner and Mrs. Claude Rodman Porter. A reception for 300 guests will follow.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Curtis, of Warrenton, are receiving congratulations on the birth of twins on Sunday. Their mother is the former Miss Dorothy Earle Hayden, daughter of Joseph E. Hayden.

Lella Warren, Author, to Address Panhellenic Association Luncheon

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor

Lella Warren, noted author and a member of Chi Omega Sorority, has been announced as guest speaker for the annual luncheon of the Panhellenic Association of Washington. The affair will be held at the Shoreham Hotel Saturday, February 15, at 1:30, with Mrs. Preston B. Kavanagh, of Kappa Alpha Theta, who is president of the association this year, presiding.

Miss Warren was active in sorority affairs as an undergraduate, and later as a graduate student. During her senior year at George Washington University she was president of the local Panhellenic Council as well as president of her chapter of Chi Omega.

Part of her first book, "A Touch of Earth," was written while she was a student at George Washington, and much of it was devoted to a study of postwar college problems.

After its publication she wrote frequently for popular magazines and did newspaper feature work and fashion writing for a New York concern. Later she dropped all other fiction and spent ten years of research and work on the first volume of a trilogy dealing with family life in America. "Foundation Stone" is the opening volume.

Published by Alfred Knopf in September, before its release it had such demand that it went into its third edition. It is now in its tenth edition. Swedish rights have been sold, also the Portuguese rights in South America. English rights were sold while it was still in manuscript form to William Collins, Ltd., and the book was issued in London January 15.

The afternoon reception on Tuesday, honoring Mrs. Roosevelt, will be from 3:30 to 5 o'clock, with music provided by the Marine Band Orchestra.

Alternating at the tea table will be past presidents of the club, including Mrs. J. F. Byrnes, South Carolina; Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Rhode Island; Mrs. Porter H. Dale, Vermont; Mrs. William N. Ewing Thomason, Texas; Mrs. Richard J. Welch, California; Mrs. John R. Murdock, Arizona, and Mrs. Robert F. Rich, Pennsylvania.

The evening reception in honor of Vice President and Mrs. Wallace on Thursday will be at 9 o'clock. The Marine Band Orchestra will play that evening also. Those pouring at the tea table will be Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and wives of other Cabinet members: Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Frank C. Walker, Mrs. Frank Knox, Mrs. Harold Ickes, Mrs. Claude R. Wickard, and Mrs. Jesse H. Jones.

This Friday, members of the club will be guests of Gen. George C. Marshall at the Fort Meyer Horse Show. They will meet at the clubhouse at 2 o'clock.

U. S. Defense, Rehabilitation Of World Placed Before Women

There are two fields of service for clubwomen of America to consider, Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, told members of the Women's Club of Melwood District yesterday. The first, she said, is national defense, and the second, is this country's part in world rehabilitation when the war is over.

Mrs. Dunbar was guest of honor and shared the program with Dr. Horace Flack, of the Maryland Legislative Council, at a luncheon meeting of the club held at the home of Mrs. Lansdale G. Sasscer, wife of the Representative, in Upper Marlboro. She described the good neighbor tour of the General Federation members to South America last summer and declared the women of this country must respond to the challenge of the world situation.

As groups and as individuals, they must be intelligently informed on economic questions and understand the European influences that are active in the South American Republics. She also urged the general teaching of Spanish in this country and of English in the Spanish-speaking nations.

There are as many misconceptions in South America about the cultural life of this country as there are false notions here about South American countries, she said, urging a broader understanding throughout the hemisphere.

Dr. Flack, who, with Mrs. Flack, was also an honor guest, discussed proposed State legislation. Mrs. Bernard J. Colye, president of the club, presided.

Mrs. Sasscer, the hostess, who was assisted by Mrs. Benjamin Suit, is legislative chairman of the club. Among the guests were Mrs. Nelson Tayman, legislative chairman for the Prince Georges Federation of Women's Club; Mrs. Rudolph S. Allen, past president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Reginald Truitt, Mrs. Thomas Wildman, past president of the Hyattsville Woman's Club; Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, noted etcher, of Washington; Mrs. John W. Todd, of Virginia, and Mrs. Frank Scrivener, of Baltimore.

Music for the occasion was presented by the Marlboro High School Glee Club under the direction of Mrs. Maud Gibbons Danner.

Pen Women's Tea Today

This afternoon at the tea of the Washington Branch of the League of American Pen Women in the Grafton Hotel studio, the table centerpiece will be a spun sugar basket, made for the occasion by John J. Kolb, father of Mrs. Mathilde Kolb Bartlett, hostess of the afternoon.

AN EVENING devoted to Dickens is planned by the literary, dramatic and music committees of the Arts Club for tomorrow. A feature will be the presentation of the Toy Shop scene from "The Cricket on the Hearth" arranged by Miss Anne Darlington and directed by Miss Marie Walcott.

There will also be a discussion by Dr. Charles Edward Russell of "The Ups-and-Downs of Dickens' Popularity in America;" selections from the novelist's works read by Maurice Jarvis; and music suited to the occasion sung by the double quartet of the Chevy Chase Womsn's Club, accompanied by Mrs. Warren W. Grimes.

In the scene from "The Cricket on the Hearth" will be J. Martin Scanage, Angela Small and Mr. and Mrs. William T. Jarvis.

Mr. and Mrs. Grimes will be the hosts at the dinner to precede the program.

AID REFUGEE CHILDREN—German bombs in London have destroyed the hostels of a group of German refugee children being cared for there by B'nai B'rith, according to a letter received from the local woman's auxiliary to the organization. As a result of the letter, the auxiliary voted unanimously to give part of the proceeds of the "gift luncheon" to be held at the Mayflower Hotel February 28, to aid these children.

The letter from London said in part: "The Nazi airwar which spares no one, has not spared our German refugee children either. Two of our hostels, and our office, have been bombed and wrecked. We are thankful that our 43 girls, resident in those particular hostels, escaped entirely unhurt, together with the matrons. You will appreciate however, that the shock and upheaval have meant the loss of many possessions, both spiritual and material. In spite of all our efforts, we have so far not succeeded in finding a new resting place and home for these, our homeless children. All are over 14, and are therefore not eligible for government evacuation from the capital. We will carry on, and help these girls to do the same, just as we hope to care for all our other children, as long as our friends support us."

WELLESLEY CLUB — "The South American Way" will be the subject of an informal talk to be given at the Washington Wellesley Club by Patricia Rey '38, at a tea meeting this afternoon from 4 to 6 p. m. at the Thomas Circle Club, 1326 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Miss Rey recently returned from a year's travel in South America financed by a Pulitzer Fellowship awarded her by the Columbia School of Journalism, where she did postgraduate work.

A brief business meeting will precede her talk. Mrs. Bernard A. Chandler, president of the club, will be chairman.

Mrs. Moe Offenberg is president of the local Hadassah chapter.

Dames Will Meet With Mrs. Wilber

Shoppers Group Hears Dr. Ziskin

Strikes in this country reached their peak in 1916 and 1917, at the time of the World War, Dr. David Ziskin, attorney for the Labor Department, told the League of Women Shoppers yesterday.

Addressing the first of a series of meetings on "Labor and Defense," held at the home of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, a league sponsor, Dr. Ziskin discussed "Labor During the World War." He gave the members a background for comparison of conditions then and in the present defense program.

Dr. Ziskin attributed the strikes during the World War to unusual conditions prevailing then, the extreme rise in prices, with wages lagging behind and the great effort to bring an adjustment. Generalization on conditions was difficult, he said, as they differed from city to city and industry to industry.

There were acute labor shortages for certain employers in particular spots in the country, he said, although the United States Employment Service and the Department of Labor reported as many men seeking jobs as there were men needed. The problem, he pointed out, was not that of supply, but distribution.

Woman Shows African Films

Ava Hamilton Singer, distinguished explorer, yesterday addressed the Washington Club at its morning meeting and showed some of the 60,000 feet of color film she took during her four years journey through the heart of Africa.

Mrs. Singer, who was introduced by Mrs. Frank Bunker, a member of the board, told of some of her experiences on her trip from Capetown to Tangiers. The first woman to make the journey alone, she cut a new road through the Congo Basin forest area and blazed a new trail through a portion of the Sahara, a service for which she was presented with a medal by the French.

Yesterday she showed interesting pictures of wild animal and tribal life, but the most dramatic were close-ups of Nyamlagria Crater in eruption. She had been in the crater New Year's day. Some weeks later, when she was many miles away, she learned it was in eruption and returned to make the pictures.

She and her native bearers climbed five days, and as they neared the summit the heat was so great the natives refused to go on. She strapped her camera to her back and continued to the top alone. There she photographed the inside with its furnace of red hot molten lava. Later, she took a rowboat and went acros Lake Kivu over which the lava was creeping. Despite the steam which was condensing on her camera lens she took shots of the lake as it was filled for two miles with the lava.

Conscientious Objector Camp MayOpen Soon

A camp where conscientious objectors can serve their country with picks and spades instead of guns is expected to open soon, probably next week, in Patapsco State Park, near Baltimore.

The Maryland project is part of a national program which awaits only a Presidential order to convert scores of deserted CCC camps into bustling centers for reforestation and soil conservation.

The blueprint for the program is on the President's desk, in the form of a memorandum awaiting his signature. It was drawn up cooperatively by half a dozen Government agencies and the National Service Board of Religious Objectors, a coordinating body for religious groups with antiwar tenets.

Present plans call for 25 camps initially, but officials believe as many as 100 may be needed by midsummer. Unofficial reports indicate that more than 6,700 selectives have already been classified as conscientious objectors to both combatant and noncombatant military service.

Do Vital Work

Men whose scruples oppose merely combatant service are inducted into the Army for service in the Medical Corps or other noncombatant units. But those who, by conscience, object to any form of military service may, under the Selective Service Act, be assigned to "civilian work of national importance."

That's where the work camps come in. Under the direction of Agriculture and Interior Department technicians, the "C. O.'s" will work just as hard as military trainees, performing work vital to an abundant American future.

Officials tell of one bearded Mennonite farmer who exploded in anger when he heard that his pacifist sons would be worked eight hours a day at camp.

"Eight hours," he shouted. "I won't let my sons go. A man must earn his bread in the sweat of his brow. Fourteen hours is a good day's work, else they'll come home lazy."

Selective Service officials use this story to demonstrate that the C. O.'s are not seeking to avoid work or save their own skins.

Work at Mine Sweeping

Paul C. French, Quaker secretary of the religious objectors' board, said yesterday in his office at the National Press Building that British C. O's refused to serve in regular army or navy, but volunteered for minesweeper service, since minesweepers save lives.

"They don't fear danger," French said. "They are perfectly willing to die for America, if that is necessary, but they won't kill for any reason."

French said that the Army and Selective Service officials "think our ideas are screwy," and they say so. "But they recognize," he added, "that a democracy is measured by the way it treats its minorities, with whom the majority of people disagree."

A. C. O. need only convince his local Selective Service Board that by "religious training and belief" he is sincerely opposed to war. He may be a member of any or no church, and he may accept or reject the idea of a personal God.

Instead of being inducted into the Army, he is inducted into a work camp.

Churches to Pay Cost

The camp at Patapsco State Park is a typical one. A desetred CCC camp, it has been contributed by the Federal Security Agency. The Interior Department has certified that it is near "work of national importance"—reforestration.

As soon as the plan is finally approved, the Interior Department will provide technical supervision. The CCC will provide tools. The Army will provide cots, bedding, pots, pans and other items of camp equipment. The Selective Service Board will choose the C. O.'s and pay their traveling expenses.

But the actual running expenses of the camp—food, clothing, medical care, education and recreational facilities—will be provided by the churches themselves through the National Service Board for Religious Objectors. The churches, too, will select and pay the supervisory personnel. Expenses will run to about $35 a month per man.

"The Selective Service people feel that we made the boys the way they are, and we ought to pay for it," French said with a smile. "It will run to hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, but we're willing."

Ford Offers Plan to Build Whole Bomber

By David J. Wilkie
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Feb. 4.—Henry Ford, it was learned today, has informed the War Department he is ready not only to build parts and sub-assemblies for bombers, but that he would like to construct the complete plane on a moving assembly line.

Ford's proposal was made following announcement of the tentative agreement under which the Ford company would make parts and sub-assemblies for Douglas and Consolidated bombers. The manufacturer already has drafted plans for a special factory with a mile-long assembly line to be erected on property Ford already owns and of sufficient area to provide a large airport adjacent to the plant.

There was no intimation as to the rate of output Ford would expect to attain in assembling the complete bomber. It was explained, however, that the schedule of production on the Pratt & Whitney radial, air-cooled 18-cylinder engines which Ford expects to start turning out late this summer, calls for one engine an hour.

It was stressed by sources close to Ford that the plan he has in mind is related wholly to the production of the bombers for which Ford, along with Chrysler and General Motors, has been asked to produce parts and sub-assemblies. Whether he might subsequently hope to use the plant for the construction of planes powered with his own new 12-cylinder, V-type engine now undergoing experimental tests in the Ford factory, was not indicated.

Ford associates, in discussing his desire to build the entire plane, emphasized that Ford had not declined to make the parts and sub-assemblies as proposed a few weeks ago. He long has cherished the desire to build the entire plane, they explained, and offered his plan as possibly a time-saver, in which materials, machinery and assembly lines could be coordinated to full advantage.

The Gallup Poll

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 4.—Public sentiment on the Ludlow war referendum, calling for a vote of the people before Congress could send men to fight oversea, is about evenly divided today, with a slight majority in favor. A survey just completed by the Institute shows that the number who approve the referendum idea has dropped in the past year, and is now about the same as it was when the European war began.

The war referendum bill, first sponsored by Congressman Louis Ludlow, has repeatedly come before Congress in recent sessions, and was reintroduced in the first week of the present session. In September, 1939, when the European conflict broke out, only a bare majority of the Nation's voters—51 per cent—favored the referendum plan. In the ensuing months the plan grew somewhat in popularity, until by the first part of 1940 it was favored by approximately three-fifths of those questioned.

52% Favor Referendum

Today, with the United States becoming more and more closely linked to the European situation through aid to Britain, the sentiment of the country is as follows:

Should a vote of the people be required before Congress can send men to fight overseas?
Yes 52%
No 48

Only a small majority (5 per cent) are undecided or without an opinion on the issue.

Those who favor the idea argue that the people who do the fighting and the dying should have a voice in the decision, that a national vote would prevent a hasty decision, and that "there might not be so many wars in the world if the people were consulted."

Those who oppose the plan claim that it would weaken the powers of the President and Congress, that Congress is better qualified to vote on war than the people are, and that a referendum might indicate national disunity to enemy powers.

Of special interest is the vote of men in the population who are subject to the draft call.

The study finds that males between the ages of 21 and 36 are no more in favor of the referendum than the rest of the population.

MALES AGED 21-36
Favor Referendum 52%
Opposed 48

Previous studies on the issue show that women in the population tend to be more in favor of a referendum than men do.

Referendum or no referendum, the Nation is overwhelmingly opposed at this time to getting into the war.

The latest Institute survey on the question of going to war showed 85 per cent opposed, only 15 per cent in favor.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Special Civilian Police To Guard Navy Yards

Navy Department is replacing guards at navy yards and shore establishments with a picked civilian police force highly trained in detecting sabotage and Fifth Column activities. Jerome Doyle, former G-Man, who more recently has been chief investigator of the district attorney's office in New York, has been appointed chief of the Navy Civil Police Corporation. A staff of between 2,500 and 3,000 civilians will be needed for the force. Each person selected will be given an intensive course in the work of spies and saboteurs. Civil Service Commission is recruiting the police force.

The average Federal employe is paid $1,871 a year and is 40.8 years old. So determined Herman Byer of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and Archie Edwards of the Civil Service Commission, after a study of 808,715 Federal workers as of January 1, 1939. The average age of women is 36.9 years compared with 41.5 years for men. However, men held 82 per cent of the Federal jobs.

Average salaries for the major occupational groups ranged from $1,192 for unskilled and manual workers to $3,137 for technical, scientific and professional employes. The statisticians discovered that salaries increase with the age of employes. Employes under 25 had average earnings of $1,360 while those between 50 and 60 earned $2,053. The percentage of women under 25 was almost twice as high as that of men, the greatest concentration being between the ages of 25 and 29. Men reach their peak between the ages of 40 and 45.

Citizens Ask Express Bus At Hearing

Upper Sixteenth Street Residents Willing to Pay Extra Fare if Necessary

Residents of Upper Sixteenth Street want express bus service and are willing to pay extra fare they testified yesterday before the Public Utilities ommission which is considering methods of improving bus service in that section.

Officials of the Capital Transit Co., which asked an increased fare for the Takoma express service, will take the stand today at 2:30 p. m. to tell why an extra fare is necessary to provide express service to the Sixteenth Street Heights residents or for any other section of the city.

S. R. Bowen, counsel for the company, asked one question of each of the 10 citizens who appeared in behalf of the express service: "Are you willnig to pay an increased fare, say 10 cents, for express service?" Without exception, the witnesses said they would, "provided it can be shown that the express service is more costly to the company than local service."

Harry C. Hensley, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Sixteenth Street Heights Citizens Association, which is seeking the improved service, called for a change in route of the bus system, establishment of an express line and better equipment. An economist in F. C. A., Hensley prepared a chart, comparing the time it takes a local and express bus to make the run from Sixteenth Street and Eastern Avenue to Thirteenth and E Streets Northwest.

Tells of "Savings"

The express bus, on a test trip last October 4, made the trip in 32.3 minutes, as compared with 41.7 minutes of the present local bus. He produced figures which purported to show how much a man "saves" by taking the express and reduced these "savings" in dollars and cents. For example, a man making 50 cents an hour, will save $56.78 a year and for a busload of people, all earning 50 cents an hour the saving will be $3,407.

The consensus among the men who appeared before the commission is they want an improved service and will leave their automobiles home, thus relieving downtown traffic congestion, will pay the 10 cents fare and want the express bus to ride the following route: South on Sixteenth Street from the Circle at Sixteenth Street and Eastern Avenue to Madison Street, east on Madison Street to Thirteenth Street and south to Pennsylvania Avenue to terminal at Ninth Street and Constitution Avenue. Limits of the express zone would be from Thirteenth and Madison Streets to Thirteenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Local Buses "Too Slow"

Frank P. Cahill, an engineer with the I. C. C., who resides in the Falkland Apartments, Sixteenth Street and Eastern Avenue, says he must leave his home at 7:36 a. m. in order to get to work on time at 8:30 a. m. He said he "could not see" why an express service should be more costly than the local trips but that "I would be willing to pay 10 cent straight fare if the commission finds out that the express service costs more."

Others testifying were Royal J. Haskell, 1636 Kalmia Road Northwest, who complained the buses "were too slow;" Robert MacWilliams, former resident of that area, who said he moved to 2900 Connecticut Avenue because the bus service was "too slow;" Ted Engelhardt, Falkland Apartments, who said workers in his office at the FWA "leave Baltimore at the same time as I leave my house and get here first;" J. Preston Swecker, 1352 Iris Street Northwest, said the "old Washington Rapid Transit Co." made the downtown run in 35 minutes as compared with 45 today by the transit company; G. Mallet Prevost, 1310 Locust Road Northwest, complained motormen on the Georgia Avenue line "pull away just as our bus comes up to Georgia Avenue and Madison Street leaving us foaming at the mouth;" Kelsey Gardner, 7527 Seventeenth Street Northwest, said the Sixteenth Street line was "a training ground for young drivers;" John J. Geary, resident manager of the Falkland Apartments, who said returns from a questionnaire indicated 72 of 73 persons using their cars to come downtown would be willing to leave their cars home if an adequate express service were provided.

T. A. Kunz, 8406 Sixteenth Street, Silver Spring, Md., said he tried the bus for about ten days when he first moved to Falkland, but "gave up" and has been using his car ever since.

Navy Draftsman Found Dead in Car

Louis Van Loock, 52, of 6213 Thirty-first Street Northwest, was found dead last night in the garage back of his home. His wife, Pauline, discovered the body slumped in his auto with the ignition on. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

A member of the household said that Van Loock, a draftsman at the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, D. C., had been ill and had left the home during the afternoon.

Gunman Robs Market Proprietor of $7

A colored gunman, about 19, held up William Waldman, 50-year-old proprietor of the Walman Market, at 1837 Nineteenth Street Northwest, last night and escaped with $7.

Waldman, who was alone in the store, told police that the youth forced him into the telephone booth, rifled the cash register, and then fled, apparently on foot. As the robber opened the door to leave, he dropped some change, but did not stop to pick it up.

$33,787 Is Pledged in the First Day of Drive For Funds of National Symphony Orchestra

Launching a ten-day drive for funds, the National Symphony Orchestra Association, meeting yesterday at the Carlton Hotel, announced pledges of 31 per cent of its $107,600 goal.

Nine volunteer committees reported pledges totaling $33,787.31. Leading the list was the special gifts unit, headed by Thomas P. Morgan, jr., with promises of $25,105.50—44 per cent of its $58,100 quota.

Yesterday's report meeting was cut short at the request of Campaign Chairman Walter Bruce Howe, to permit association members to journey to New York, where the National Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Hans Kindler, was to present its first concert last night in Carnegie Hall.

There will be three more report meetings before the campaign concludes, Howe announced. He urged the workers to rally behind an "all out" program for "defense" of the orchestra.

No U. S. Pay Cuts in Sight, Ramspeck Says

Federal employes need fear no pay cuts at this session of Congress, Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, said last night.

Representative Ramspeck told 50 members of the Federal Club, meeting in the Roosevelt Hotel, that while their salary scales are safe, their retirement system may be due for a housecleaning.

An advocate of boosting the employes' own contributions to their retirement pensions, Ramspeck pointed out that the Government's share of annual retirement payments has already hit the $100,000,000 mark.

May Be Doubled Soon

He said this figure may be doubled within a year or 18 months as a result of adding 200,000 employes to the Federal pay-roll since last June, and of eventually bringing between 125,000 and 250,000 more under the retirement system through the Ramspeck Civil Service Expansion Act.

When the Government's retirement expense hits $200,000,000 a year, said Ramspeck, it will be "getting into pretty big money."

He warned the employes it would not be a wise policy to sit by and count on having the present system continue, simply because it has been going on for 20 years. He pointed out that a bill had been introduced in the last session which would have merged the Federal retirement system with the social security system and declared a similar effort is likely to be made again.

U. S. Now Pays 92 Per Cent

Increasing the employe contributions, he said, would "put us in a position where we can defend the system." He added that the Government today is paying its retired civil servants 92 cents out of every dollar of annuities they receive.

Following Ramspeck's talk, Dr. C. W. Warburton, deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration and president of the club, assigned the club's service committee to study the retirement suggestions.

Customer Fined $500 for Assault On F. C Knight

Daniel Braxton, 28, colored, of Alexandria, was found guilty on one of two charges of felonious assault on two prominent Alexandria men after a jury in Alexandria Corporation Court deliberated four hours yesterday.

Braxton was found guilty of assaulting F. Clinton Knight, one of the proprietors of the store of R. E. Knight & Sons, Alexandria, November 9, when he came to the store and demanded a refund on a purchase he was alleged to have bought elsewhere. Knight was stabbed and seriously wounded.

The jury acquitted Braxton on charges of felonious assault on David E. Bayliss, Alexandria contractor, who was cut when attempting to disarm him.

Braxton was fined $500 and costs in the case. Unable to raise the fine, he was technically sentenced to 60 days in jail under the Virginia Code maximum provision for failure to make forfeit. Since he had already served 60 days through a previous mistrial, he was released.

15 Drug Store Workers Sign as Blood Donors

The District Chapter of the American Red Cross announced yesterday that 15 male employes of a Peoples Drug Store branch at Eleventh and G Streets Northwest, had registered as volunteer blood donors for the Army Medical Center here.

Gen. T. R. Keefer, chairman, said the chapter is cooperating with the Army and Navy in a move to build up a reserve of blood plasma. Persons desiring to register may do so by telephoning or visiting the chapter headquarters, 1730 E Street Northwest.

Postlude

Mrs. Doolittle Back to Charm With Violin

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mary Hill Doolittle gives a violoncello recital Tuesday night in the Arts Club, assisted by Lily Mayerhofer Schwarz, pianist. Program: English Suite (Purcell-Ronchini), Sonata in A minor, Op. 36 (Grieg), Sonata in B flat minor, Op 8 (Dohnanyi), Lamento (Faure), Scotch Pastorale (Saenger), The Tenpenny Bit (Hughes).

BROWN

Mary Hill Doolittle, first violoncellist of the Baltimore Orchestra, who played for members of the Arts Club last season, returned yesterday to give them another evening of enjoyable music. She brought with her as assisting artist, Lily Mayerhofer Schwarz, who was a capable collaborator in a progr— which demanded more than accompanying. On the list were two sonatas, and sonata reading is quite a different matter from providing harmonic support for a solo instrument. The visitors showed a close consentience in interpretation and an agreeable matching of color-dynamics.

The first of the sonatas was Grieg's in A minor, a work justly esteemed for its lyric beauty and poetic intensity. Grieg just missed the ranks of the great composers because he lacked the quality of genius, but his talent was large in the field to which he limited himself—that of nationalistic expression. He trained his melodic inventiveness in Norwegian ways until his themes were indistinguishable from the native folk growth. The sonata abounds in these characteristic tone intervals, and has throughout a primitive flavor.

Erno von Dohnanyi's B flat minor sonata is an early work which shows no trace of the folk music of Hungary in which the composer later became interested. It is highly romantic in an impassioned vein, and the vivacity of the writing strains against the severity of form. In contrast to the simplicity of the Grieg sonata, it has harmonic richness and technical complexities.

Mrs. Doolittle began the recital with an entertaining suite arranged by the Italian violoncellist, Francesco Ronchini, from pieces by the first great English composer, Henry Purcell. In succession appeared a saraband, a corrente, a hornpipe and an "ayre" followed by a repetition of the hornpipe. The music has a healthy and vigorous stride and an authentic British manner.

A concluding group contained Gabriel Faure's poignant "Lamento," a snappy "Scotch Pastorale" by Oscar Saenger, and Herbert Hughes' arrangement of an Irish jig, "The Tenpenny Bit."

One has had occasion before to commend Mrs. Doolittle's mellow and suave tone, which was again in evidence.

Total traffic deaths for 1940 .. 79

Traffic accidents injured a half-dozen persons in Washington yesterday. Two of them were seriously injured and two of the casualties were children.

Police last night were searching for a hit-run driver whose car struck and seriously injured Jeff O. Hicks, 34, of Springfield, Va., on Seventh Street between L and M Streets Northwest.

Hicks, struck as he was getting out of his machine, was taken to Casualty Hospital with possible fractures of the ribs and back. The hospital reported his condition serious.

At Second and L Streets Southwest a pedestrian was pinned beneath a car overturned in a collision. In Providence Hospital Helen Green, 36, colored, of 111 L Street Southwest, the pedestrian, was found to have suffered injuries of the head and body.

Barbara Scott, 33, of 1107 Sixteenth Street Northwest, driver of the overturned car, escaped with minor cuts. Police said the driver of the other car was John H. Parkhurst, 43, of Crestview, Md., who was uninjured. He was charged with reckless driving.

Dorothy Legett, 6, of 1619 Church Street Northwest, suffered possible fractures of the skull and leg when struck by an auto in front of her home.

Struck by one car and run over by another, Richard Ballard, 9, colored, of 2609 P Street Northwest, was reported to have suffered a possible fracture of the pelvis.

The boy was knocked down at Twenty-seventh and P Streets Northwest and taken to Georgetown Hospital. He was transferred to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

Schulte Asks More Police For Traffic

Calls D. C. Situation Worst in World; Southeast Citizens Urge Full-Time Judge

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the House subcommittee on District traffic, last night called Washington's traffic problems "worse than those in any other city in the world," and set forth nine proposals to lower the city's accident rate.

He spoke before more than 40 delegates to the Southeast Citizens Council, who had met to consider eight accident prevention suggestions of their own.

Schulte cited the "urgent need" for 50 more policemen to patrol the streets and urged that this force be augumented by many police now ticketing parked cars, "which never killed anyone." The citizens hiked his appeal to 100 more traffic police.

Urger Stiffer Fines

He pleaded for a uniform system of fines, asked for stiffer fines for speeding offenses, and urged appointment of a single, full-time traffic judge.

To relieve traffic congestion, he asked for tunnels and more bridges across the rivers into Maryland and Virginia and suggested that built-in parking facilities in all new apartments and downtown buildings would help clear the streets of parked cars.

The Congressman pointed out that a 2-cent additional tax on gasoline would raise approximately $2,500,000 which could be used to finance more underpasses, bridges, tunnels and additions to the police force.

Would Improve Lighting

Better bus service, he said, would also relieve traffic by lowering the number of those driving their own cars to work. His other suggestions included elimination of 30-mile speed "spots" throughout the District, more police at street intersections and improved street lighting.

The citizens, following Schulte's talk, approved an eight-point resolution submitted by their traffic committee, headed by Louis Gelbman. The resolution demanded: Stricter enforcement of speed regulations; 25 additional police for the Southeast area and 100 for the city as a whole; a speed-up in Traffic Court trials; placement of traffic lights on M Street Southeast at Fourth, Eighth and Eleventh Streets; elimination of surface safety islands; tighter enforcement of pedestrian regulations; a full-time single traffic judge, and use of many police now being used to mark parked cars to patrol the streets.

North Cleveland Park

The North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night denounced a proposal of Bureau of Standards officials to close Van Ness Street Northwest, which, members charged, would make of the section a "bottleneck community."

Bureau officials desire to close the thoroughfare to protect delicate scientific instruments and also against possible sabotage.

Members adopted a resolution advocating a law forcing construction of garages of the underground variety in all new apartments, office buildings and theaters.

The unit also opposed any changes in the District's zoning ordinances which would permit operation of parking areas on vacant lots in A-restricted areas.

Weiler to Lead Class

Harold F. Weiler, of McLean, Va., will conduct a series of Red Cross first aid classes, starting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Dunn Loring School. Thereafter, classes will meet Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m. each week.

Housebreaker Using Tear Gas Seized in Chase

MRS. LAURA JACQUIER

A 22-year-old housebreaker yesterday found himself confronted with an angry woman, and then by three policemen, shortly after he jimmied his way into what he thought was an empty house.

Two of the policemen captured him at the end of a three-block chase, after he had discharged a tear-gas gun into the face of the third.

Then the woman, who had stayed home from work because of a headache, returned to bed. It had been her failure to answer the bell that led the intruder to believe no one was home.

The youth was held last night at the Sixth Precinct Station, where police reported that he had confessed to one other housebreaking.

Mrs. Laura Jacquier, a Veterans' Administration employe, summoned the policemen to her home, 600 Aspen Street Northwest, after the intruder had entered and gone to the second floor.

She said she had remained home from the office because of illness. A short time after the doorbell rang, she said, she heard someone jimmy the back door to her home. Mrs. Jacquier said she immediately called the police.

Motorcycle Policeman G. F. Bryant was the first to arrive at the house and met the burglar in the front hall. Before the officer could grab the man, the latter pulled a fountain-pen type tear gun and discharged it. Bryant was temporarily blinded by the gas.

Mrs. Jacquier also was affected, but quickly recovered.

The suspect fled the house just as Policeman S. R. Collins and G. M. Wilson arrived in a scout car. They pursued the youth over fences and through alleys and finally caught him in the 6700 block Seventh Place Northwest.

Held for investigation last night, the youth, police said, was questioned in connection with several other burglaries in the same section during the last few months. He was reported to have confessed to one.

Mrs. Jacquier said $1.25 was missing from a bedroom bureau after the youth left.

Citizens Urge Military Road Bus Route

Steering Committee To Ask P. U. C. For Crosstown Service There

The citizens associations' steering committee on the crosstown bus route last night voted without dissent to urge the Military Road route upon the Public Utilities Commission Tuesday.

Meeting at the Thomson School, the committee was told by its chairman, Nathan M. Lubar, that the southern route over Porter Street and Park Road was ruled out by the weakness of the Klingle Road bridge in Rock Creek Park.

Lubar revealed that the District engineer would oppose bus traffic over the bridge, since the bridge could only carrily safely a load of 12,000 pounds, and a loaded bus might weight 13,000 pounds.

Initial hearings on the project will begin at 10 a. m. Tuesday in the P. U. C. hearing room in the District Building.

Committees reporting on the Military Road route said the only objection that could be raised to that route was that it would not be profitable.

They countered this argument by pointing out that the area served by this route had shown a 70 per cent gain in population in recent years compared with less than a 20 per cent gain elsewhere in the city. They also argued that establishment of good transportation would further accelerate the population increase.

Columbia Heights Citizens

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association went on record last night in favor of a crosstown bus line through the Columbia Heights area, extending the Park Road bus line to South Dakota Avenue and Bladensburg Road Northeast and Massachusetts and Western Avenues Northwest.

The resolution, introduced by Walter I. Swanton, pointed out that the proposed route "passes through an area with a large tributary population, and would intersect with and serve a large number of streetcar and bus lines running downtown and to other sections of the town."

The association urged the appointment to the District Court to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Justice Peyton C. Gordon of a "comparatively young and qualified person, who will be willing as a patriotic duty in these times of national defense to serve at the salary fixed by law, without serving as lecturer in any law school, and who would be willing to forego the three-month vacation usually taken by the judges until the docket is brought up to date."

Following a talk by Lieut. Charles Weber, of the Thirteenth Precinct, the association recommended the addition of 100 men to the police force. It reiterated its former stand in favor of a public defender for the District.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The National Picks Up Some Early Cancellations

Promised Plays Pile Up on Booking Sheets; 'This Thing Called Love' Is Goofy Business; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE CURRENT SEASON of legitimate drama on E Street is rapidly catching up with itself.

Next week the National Theater will house the long-deferred engagement of William Saroyan's double-prize winning play, "The Time of Your Life," with Eddie Dowling and Julie Haydon in the principal roles originally penciled in for last October 7. It is about time.

BELL

But that isn't all. Conscious of its obligation to its subscription cities outside Manhattan, the Theater Guild-Gilbert Miller production of Will Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," with Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans, now is in its "last weeks" at the St. James Theater, New York. That is another one we had thought was promised for the early weeks of the season, despite what later was construed elsewhere as ambiguity in the terms of the first announcement. At any rate, "Twelfth Night" will close on Broadway and take to the road immediately its itinerary through the socalled hinterlands can be completed.

Eight Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription cities will comprise the route, with Washington first on the list—which may or may not be chronological. The others are Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, Columbus and Buffalo. Boston and Philadelphia beat the Capital to the punch and saw the play prior to its New York premiere.

"It's a long lane," "All things come to him," "Better late than never," and so on and so forth.

In the meantime, "The Male Animal" is packing them in and laying them low with its sound sense and bombshell comedy. Limitations of time and space unfortunately deleted the names of Julie Stevens, Don De Fore, Matt Briggs and Eulabelle Moore, as a maid of unique resourcefulness, from the list of those who contribute greatly to the fun of the piece, in Monday's review. "The Male Animal," thanks to everybody in it, is a rambunctious and riotous creation, such as only comes along about every tenth blue moon.

It has always been pretty generally understood that "This Thing Called Love" is instinct with deviltry and delirium, but it has seldom been made so conclusive as in Columbia's new marital comedy of that name, filtered onto the screen for the drama desks yesterday afternoon. In its approach to one of the more bizarre aspects of young married life, it belongs in the same envelope as "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," recently "sneak previewed" at RKO-Keith's. In both pictures, the wives have a "plan." They are equally insane. Both skate dangerously close to what the Hays office used to call thin ice, but nobody breaks through, so the discreet daring becomes merely exhilarating without any serious tinge of impropriety. In fact, one wonders why such a tea-kettle typhoon was kicked up over Binnie Barnes' having her $200 evening gown ripped off by a jealous rival. You'll find out when "This Thing Called Love" unravels itself at the Earle, beginning Friday. Rosalind Russell and Melvyn Douglas costarred and hitting on all sixteen.

⊂+⊃

When Alexander Woollcott comes to the National the week of February 24, in the Sam H. Harris production of the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman comedy, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," the star's supporting cast will be equally familiar to the habitues of the "legit" and the "movies." Important roles will be acted by Edith Atwater, Doris Nolan, Erik Rhodes, Teddy Hart, Lea Penman, Clyde Fillmore, Minnie Dupree, Joseph Marks, Walter Coy, Arthur Griffin, Janet Fox, Priestly Morrison, James Truex, Sidney Grant, Gretchen Davidson, Jeanne Wardley, Margaret Gainer and William Layton. The Town Crier would seem to have something to cry, but not "cry" about—or however, depending upon whether you shed your tears in or out of quotes.

Versatile, that's what she is. I mean that Sandy Grant, of the Rhythm Rockets, this week is introducing "I'm Stepping Out with a Dream Tonight" at Loew's Capitol, with a celeste as first aid. Copies of the song, composed by Miss Grant and Sparty Donato, of the Capitol Orchestra, with lyrics by Gene Ford, have been sent to a New York publisher who has expressed interest in the new melody. The last time Sandy appeared on the Capitol stage it was as a ballet dancer. And the next?

Abhorring repetition above all things, we refuse to mention again that "The Philadelphia Story" opens tomorrow on the screen at Loew's Palace. Or that it is a sure shot for next year's list of the "Ten Best." Or that Katharine Hepburn, Jimmy Stewart and Cary Grant are at their best in it—which is plenty good. Find out for yourself.

Beauty Does 'Bit' For Lionel's Test

Lionel Barrymore arrived at M-G-M. for wardrobe and make-up tests for his first part out of a wheel chair in three years. Standing before the camera, he was surprised by a snicker from Cameraman Clyde DeVinna and others on the stage. Looking around, he discovered that Laraine Day had crept up behind him and was sharing the test. "It's the first picture you've done without me in three years," she grinned. "But I'm getting in on the test, anyway."

Hollywood, Feb.. 4 (INS).—The bright and informative magazine which King features gets out for some of the Hearst and other newspapers contained not long ago a novel, "Widow of Devil's Island," by Nicholas Smith. Briefly, the story is that of a man who goes to Devil's Island for a crime his wife committed. Later she becomes remorseful and goes to the island to be near him.

PARSONS

Jack Warner bought the novel with Bette Davis in mind. She'll play the wife, of course, with James Stevenson as the husband.

I'll be interested to see what Twentieth Century-Fox does with Nazimova in "Blood and Sand," in which she plays Tyrone Power's mother. I was terribly disappointed in her in "Escape," for you never got the idea she was Robert Taylor's mother. The rest of the picture thought was excellent with Norma Shearer, Bob and Conrad Veidt.

Perhaps, in "Blood and Sand," Nazimova will get an opportunity to show that a glorious actress she is.

Rumors have been flying thick and fast that William Le Baron, managing director of production, was saying adieu to Paramount. Today the official word came that Bill had resigned to produce pictures for Paramount independently. The sequel to the rumor, not yet confirmed, is that Buddy De Sylva, the bright lad whose "Du Barry Was a Lady" and "Panama Hattie" have made theater history, will step into Le Baron's shoes as head production man under the aegis of Y. Frank Freeman.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Gail Patrick made her first public appearance since her divorce with Lieut. Harold Hastings, a Texas aviator, at the Mocambo; Sharon Lynn is critically ill in New York and will have a major operation. Her husband, Barney Glazer, well known writer, has gone East to be with her; the weekend was again a merry-go-round. Cocktails at Lady Mendl's, dinner at Mike Romanoff's with a crowd who went to a party at Kay Francis' house. Saw Miriam Hopkins there with Edwin Justus Mayer. She looked exceptionally well. What a view from Kay's house, atop a hill, with the myriads of lights below.

Sylvia Fairbanks entertained at luncheon Sunday for Sir Victor Sassoon; Parsons, jr., was the guest of honor at a party Sunday night at the Cocoanut Grove, so I went at her invitation. Edith Fellows, all grown up, sat at an adjoining table with Robert Jordon; Binnie Barnes now blonde; Mike Frankovich.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 4.

When someone mentioned the cost of Frank Capra's latest, "Meet John Doe," which was a million and three-quarters, Frank suddenly lapsed into reminiscing about his first movie, which was "Fultah Fisher's Boarding House." He made it for $1,600 and sold it for $3,500. Frank tried to run a print of it the other night, found the film had completely disintegrated. He'll pay almost anything for another print

When Paulette Goddard finished "Pot O' Gold," the 16 dancing girls in the picture banded together and bought her a modeled hand filled with white orchids. With it came this note: "Orchids to you for being the best sport we've ever worked with." Paulette found out favorite color of each girl and gifted them with sweaters in those shades.

Dean Jagger drove a team of horses through a forest fire in "Western Union" and said later, "Why should I let a stunt man take a chance? I was brought up on a farm, I know horses." After that scene, the stunt men of the company gave him a dinner party. The Jaggers just celebrated their sixth wedding anniversary, assisted by the Fred MacMurrays and Vincent Prices.

Because Methodists don't drink, Hartzell Spence, who wrote "One Foot in Heaven" wouldn't be photographed with even a glass of water in his hand, while he was a visitor here.

Ray Bolger's so sympathetic in "Sunny" they're making bets on the set that audience will want him instead of John Carrol to marry the girl. Ray's a great dancer, does one called "The Spirit of the Circus" in which he pantomimes every performer—acrobat, fat woman, bareback rider, lion tamer. It's a riot.

⊂+⊃

Nice to see those eccentric dancers the Hartmans in the same picture. You may remember how good they were some time ago with Shirley Temple. This time I hope they'll linger longer.

Mary Martin only gets one kiss in "Kiss the Boys Goodby," but the comic, Vera Vague, who plays Mary's rival, is kissed in practically every scene, and her favorite line is "Take my lips—they're yours."

Charmian, the love of Jack London, tells an amusing tale. When Jack submitted "The Sea Wolf" in 1904 to his publishers, they complained that the woman was not believable. Jack said, "The woman is the one believable thing in the story. I love her." He did. She was Charmian.

It will be directed against your posing for photos showing you throwing banned books into a fire—even though the books were obscene.

JOE MARTIN, JR.: Werner Schroeder, the Republican National Committeeman from Illinois, now is the dark horse to succeed you as chairman of the Republican National Committee . . . CORDELL HULL: When the President and Charlie Chaplin were introduced, F. D. opened the conversation by laughing and saying: "You're giving us a lot of trouble in South America." He referred to the banning of "The Great Dictator."

BROOKS COSTUME CO.: At the "Cuff-Links" dinner given at the White House last week each of the guests was supposed to come dressed as somebody else. When Eleanor Roosevelt entered the room she discovered that she was the only one in costume—so she returned to her room and changed into a formal gown. Eleanor had come dressed as "Whistler's Mother."

CLIFFORD ODETS: Boris Aronson, the scenic designer who is making the sets for your new play, now possesses one of the rarest Christmas cards in the country. It was sent to him a few days before the New Year and expressed good wishes for the coming year of 1940 . . . The "0" then was crossed out and a "1" substituted to correct the figure to "1941" . . . That card, revealing a simple error in writing numerals, was sent to him by the world's greatest mathematician—Albert Einstein."

J. EDGAR HOOVER: Courtney Ryley Cooper, your biographer, who committed suicide recently, wrote his own epitaph. His widow disclosed it last week. Cooper, during a party with other newspaper men, had participated in an epitaph game and submitted his own: "I had to make a deadline to get here" . . . GROUP THEATER: Pietro di Donato, whose dramatization of "Christ in Concrete" you wanted to produce, is finishing his new book instead. He'll call it "The Golden Bowl."

AL JOLSON: Your coproducer had five doctors backstage watching you at the last performance of "Hold On To Your Hats" for evidence that you were not too sick to continue the run.

PRES. HARRY W. CHASE: The "George K. Arthur" enin meteorology and navigation is the film star who once was rolled in your N. Y. He wants to enter the Silver Skates Derby in N. Y. if he can get an A. A. U. card.

JOSEPH CADDEN: White House displeasure at your American Youth Congress was made known long before last week—when Mrs. Roosevelt declined your invitation to speak. Before the election, when Dorothy Thompson lunched with the President, she discussed her objections to the A. Y. C. "Dorothy," urged the President, "tell it to Eleanor."

JOE McCARTHY: At the Baseball Writers' Dinner Quentin Reynolds told of the reception he attended for Lieut. Davis, the man who dug up that unexploded bomb near St. Paul's and then refused to permit any one but himself to drive the truck which took that bomb outside the city limits. At the reception a British officer told Quent: "That was one of the most heroic deeds I ever heard of. Do you know anybody with more courage?" . . . "Yes," Reynolds replied. "A man named Lou Gehrig."

MORRIS GEST: Margalo Gillmore, the star, once applied to your father-in-law, David Belasco, for a job. She found him wearing his usual turnabout collar, seated at his desk in the semi-darkened room, with the careful lighting property showing his spiritual splendor. "Return in an hour and a half," Belasco suggested, in a hushed voice . . . Margalo started to leave, and Belasco asked: "How do you plan spending that hour and a half?" . . . "By going out," Margalo confessed, "and looking for another job."

BENNETT CERF: Deems Taylor read that your new cousin, Ginger Rogers—whom he had known for many years—was in town now and tried to locate her. He couldn't find her. After placing many phone calls, Taylor finally learned that Ginger Rogers was registered at the Ritz Towers under her real name, "Virginia McMath" . . . He, therefore, sent this telegram: "Virginia McMath, Ritz Towers, New York City. I've had a hard time locating you. Who do you think you are, anyway, Ginger Rogers?

Longer Closing Of Bridges Urged

Lengthening of the period when draw spans of the Arlington Memorial and Highway Bridges do not open for ship passage was urged yesterday at a hearing in the United States Engineer's office as a means of expediting Washington-Virginia vehicular traffic.

Representatives of the Arlington County Civic Federation, the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, and the Capital Transit Co. backed the extension of the closed period. They asked that the draws on both bridges be kept closed from 7:30 to 9 a. m. and 3:30 to 5:30 p. m., instead of between 8:20 and 9 a. m. and 4:30 and 5:15 p. m., as at present.

Catsonis Will Speak

Achilles Catsonis, regional director of the Greek War Relief Fund, will discuss the present situation in Greece at a meeting of the Jewish Community Center Institute on Foreign Affairs at 8:30 p. m. today. The meeting will be held at the Center Building, Sixteenth and Q Streets Northwest.

More Defense Housing Units Forecast for Washington

Defense housing construction in Washington beyond the 2,684 units either begun or projected under Federal auspices was forecast yesterday in an announcement of Defense Housing Coordinator C. F. Palmer, of a further survey of housing needs in the Capital.

Referring to Monday's approval by President Roosevelt of construction of 1,000 units in the District area in addition to units previously projected, Palmer declared that an additional program can be expected.

The program, he said, "will outline the complete need as soon as the influx of workers can be adequately analyzed."

Construction Summary

At the same time, Palmer issued a summary of housing construction now underway under supervision of the Navy. The summary showed that 4,127 units are being built in Washington, Virginia and Maryland at a cost of $10,252,130.

Throughout the Nation, Palmer said, construction has been started on 46 Navy housing projects to provide 16,000 dwelling units for more than 70,000 persons. The expenditure for the total is $47,112,878.

In the immediate Washington area the largest projects are a 600-family dwelling being built for civilian and enlisted personnel of the Washington Navy Yard at a cost of $1,900,000; a 350-family project for workers at the Indianhead (Md.) powder factory and housing for 300 workers at the Alexandria (Va.) torpedo station.

Trailers Ordered

At Newport News the Navy is spending $2,966,260 for 1,250 units and at Norfolk $2,284,000 for 1,042 families. Other construction will house personnel at Annapolis, Cheltenham and Piney Point in Maryland and at Dahlgren, Portsmouth, St. Juliens Creek and Quantico in Virginia.

Meanwhile, the Government turned to consideration of putting some of its defense homes on wheels to keep up with shifting production. Defense officials announced they will place orders for about 6,500 trailers immediately with other orders to follow as soon as trailer manufacturers have expanded production capacity.

Experts End Tour Of Latin-American Rubber Production

By the Associated Press

A party of Agriculture Department rubber experts have returned from a five-month survey in Latin America with plans for reestablishing commercial rubber production in the Western Hemisphere.

The specialists located areas suitable for commercial rubber growing in Peru, Columbia and Ecuador. Acting upon their recommendations, the department announced it would establish four nurseries in these countries for propagating hevea rubber seedlings on a large scale for distribution among farmers.

The party was under the leadership of Dr. E. C. Stakman, of the University of Minnesota and agent for the department. Three other parties are still in Latin America—one in Panama, one in Brazil and the other in Mexico.

A Centenarian Explains: 'Lord Has Given Me Time to Repent'

Good Humor Sheds A Light in the Dark World of Amos Rebert

From eternal darkness and almost complete silence Amos Rebert yesterday told the secret of his century of life.

"I believe that the good Lord has given me time to repent," he said. "I am never satisfied with my repentance. I ask for still more time that I may be perfectly pleasing to the Good Man."

He sat in his room at the National Lutheran Home for the Aged. Today he will descend to the dining room for the first time in many years to treat the entire "family" of the home to turkey and ice cream on the hundredth anniversary of his birth.

Born in Coduras, Pa., February 5, 1841, Amos Repert passed most of his years as a farmer in the Pennsylvania Dutch farming country. He said he has never smoked no drunk.

A Man of Good Humor

On March 2, 1922, he entered the home, and a few years later began to lose his sight. Totally blind and almost completely deaf, he passes much of his time reading the Bible in moon type. Frequently he takes a stroll along the corridor.

The good humor of a man who enjoys whistling is his. A visitor yesterday whistled in his ear at his request.

"Whistle's no good," said Amos Rebert. "It doesn't keep a good tune. It's too new. Listen to this."

He doesn't sleep much in the daytime, but likes to eat. "Three times a day. Anything. It doesn't matter what you eat."

If the world is troubled today, Amos Rebert does not know it. It is difficult to describe to him. But he has a cure for all troubles. In a clear voice he spoke his message to any who will listen.

"It's the Twenty-third Psalm," he said. "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want . . ." He recited the entire Psalm.

"And the Thirteenth Chapter of First Corinthians: Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not love' . . ."

His visitors told him they must leave.

"Goodby," he said. "God bless you. If the Lord sees fit you will come again next year."

Court Decides Case Against Wage Division

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Feb. 4.—Federal Judge William H. Atwell held today that firms paying wages or salaries equal to or in excess of wages and hours law minimum in pursuance of genuine contracts are in compliance with the act, regardless of methdos of pay.

The court's ruling denied a petition by the United States Wage and Hour Division for a restraining injunction against the A. H. Belo Corporation, publishers of the Dallas News, to halt alleged violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

Further, Judge Atwell sustained the Belo Corporation's petition for a declaratory judgment as to the legality of its methods of paying employes.

The wage-hour division had contended the corporation was not computing overtime in accordance with the act's provisions, arguing wages and overtime should be based on a computed hourly wage in spite of a specification as to such wage in an employe's contract which provides for a weekly guaranteed sum as a salary.

Judge Atwell, commenting on the methods of figuring wages and hours as insisted upon by the wage-hour division, said:

"It emasculates the right of contracts. It emasculates the fullness of the meaning of the word employe. It makes vassals of employe and employer and leaves us hanging by our thumbs, at the mercy of the construction of the Government as to what we mean when we contract."

The judge added he could not conceive "of law being intended to unsettle amicable relations between employer and employe."

Employes testified they were satisfied with the wage arrangements.

Attorney Llewellyn Dauke and other counsel for the Wage-Hour Division, had stated that an adverse judgment virtually would nullify the Fair Labor Standards Act "in many of its phases."

Hull Defends Halifax Visits On Capitol Hill

Secretary Hull told the America First Committee yesterday that recent calls by Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, on Congressional leaders at the Capitol were not considered "a departure from established precedents."

Hull replied to a request from the committee that he inquire into the Ambassador's visits, which the committee said were "obviously more than courtesy calls and were in fact efforts to influence the legislative branch of our Government."

Halifax went to the Capitol last week to talk to Chairman George (Democrat), of Georgia, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Later he reported that they "discussed the time-table of the British-aid bill now pending in Congress."

The committee, which is opposed to the Administration's bill in its present form, said that since these conversations were intended "to influence the legislative branch of our Government," it assumed that Hull was making a full inquiry into the conduct of the British Ambassador.

Hull replied:

"According to information available to the Department of State, the British Ambassador, who has but recently arrived in this country, made a series of pro forma courtesy calls a few days ago in and about the Capitol, in the course of which he visited the chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs.

"The department does not consider that such calls constituted a departure from established precedents."

U. S. Considers 2 More River Shed Projects

President Roosevelt said yesterday that establishment of central authorities over the Columbia and Arkansas River sheds, to operate along lines of the Tennessee Valley Authority, is under consideration on Capitol Hill.

At the same time, he said he knew of no plans to place the Bonneville project in the Pacific Northwest under the War Department, as had been rumored on the coast.

Wallace to Refer Housing Request

Aides of Vice President Wallace said last night he would refer to the District Commissioners, the Army, and the WPA a request made by the American Youth Congress for Government housing for 400 colored delegates to the Town Meeting of Youth this weekend.

Youth Congress leaders, headed by Joseph Cadden, national secretary, discussed their problem with the Vice President's aides and left a petition which urged Wallace to support a District civil rights bill, "which would make it unlawful for business establishments to discriminate against any persons because of his race or color."

PAUL YOUNG'S colorful club intime is all set for a sizzling re-opening next Tuesday, February 11. Ralph Lewis, the wacky but hilarious li'l emcee who did a six-week stretch at P. Y.'s last fall, will be out in front whooping up the doings. Jerry Brandow, a lad who makes a practice of setting pianos and night club floors on fire with lightning boogie-woogie rhythm and tap-stepping, heads the show. Remember that "Hold Tight" hit of a season or two ago? Jerry wrote it. Also there'll be the Andrews Sisters, effulgent dancers from Miami. In tone and speed the show will be typically New York. Al Spieldock's dance music has that Bennah Goodman touch, is eminently listenable and danceable . . . Physical changes at the spot include a new system of fluorescent lightning, de luxe draperies and carpeting . . . Remember, too, the name is now officially Paul Young's, not the Romany Room.

Iris Wayne, dancing at the Shoreham, is overawed by her good luck. She'd been worrying about whether she was wise in leaving Al Jolson's hit, "Hold On to Your Hats." And here the temperamental Al has closed the show and is being sued for $100,000 by his partner.

DOUBLING IN MAESTROS. Cosmos Room dancers felt they'd suddenly hit the maestro jackpot the other afternoon. For in came Ray Heatherton, singing leader of his Metronome Room band, on a busman's holiday. Carmen Cavallaro promptly spied him and the next thing Ray knew he was on the bandstand with scores of voices demanding that he sing "Where or When" from "Babes in Arms," in which he recently appeared. After rousing encore demands, he ended with "Beguine." Which is a novel way to end.

A SKATING SENSATION was singer Eve Knight of the King Cole Room when she glided out at Riverside. The practicing Eagles stopped cold to watch her. One finally muttered, "I never saw a girl make such graceful gestures before taking a nose-dive." Evie defiantly countered, "Well, I was the best skater up in Reedsville, Va.

WHEN THE ORCHESTRA laughs it's a sign a floor show act is good—plenty. And tiny Yvonne Moray had the Lotus orchestra in stitches at her opening performance in the "New Yorker Revue." Especially funny is the way Yvonne reaches for her high notes, gives a terrific girlhandling to "Indian Love Call." We lost count of her encores. . . . A pair of bright young moderns, the Billingtons, combine light comedy very prettily with dancing. The girl half of the team looks exactly like Dorothy McGuire, who played the title role in "Claudia" at the National last week.

Dates to remember this week . . . The new "Tip Top Revue" opens this evening at Casino Royal. It's direct from Chicago, said to be vurra snazzy. It's "Opportunity Night" again tomorrow evening at Ciro's Famous Village. Diversion by the barrel-full and you'll be surprised at the fine talent. Another "Piggy Party" will be on at River Bend this evening. Well-fed people are not so likely to catch colds, say the medicos.

NEPTUNE PICTURE. Milt North looking positively smug about Leslie Hare, his new singer. Leslie high-schooled and did her first singing at Woodstock, Va. . . . Juanita Archer, noting the mike technique of her husband, Gene Archer, Juanita's a singer, too; comes from Clarksburg, W. Va. . . . Pianist Eddie Chase of the Pall Mall Room, who's always squiring folks around. Last week it was Dorothy Manchester, of New York. This week it was his mother, sister and brother, Mrs. Edward T. Chase and Ruth Chase and Norman Chase, all of Cape Cod, though Norman's on his way to Miami . . . Neptune's piano-playing Johnny Hartsfield dashes up to say, "Is there anyone around here I can ignore?"

LEE EVERETT,
emcee and "good time dynamo" of Restaurant 823 Fifteenth Street

AD LIB WARBLING of the finest is a commonplace in Burt's Trans-Lux. I see the N. B. C. Studios are upstairs and a special table is always held open for the radio folks. El Gary, of the "Dream House" hour and the two Kibitzers were impromptu Trans-Lux entertainers a few eves ago.

THE CAMERA FIENDS. Milton Davis, leader of the Rainbow Room orchestra, has been taking his own pictures for the last 10 years, now uses color film almost entirely . . . Dick Ashby, owner of Dick's Grill, was only recently bittten by the motion-picture-making bug, says he wasted $35 worth of film before getting a good 100-foot reel. But he's going strong now . . . Tony Gaudio, Troika's drummer lad, is another motion picture maker, gets time and money-saving pointers from Ol' Massa Davis of Rainbow. . . . Adolph, of the Madrillon staff, is so good at taking stills that he goes around the very late spots taking pictures after Madrillon is closed.

Most strenuous piano player in town is Hi Hat's brilliant Sandy Ross. He takes off both rings and wrist watch before he lights into the keyboard.

MICROPHONE MANNERS. Mayfair's Paul Kain makes visiting aviators happy by playing appropriate tunes in their honor . . . A remarkable number of young laddies stop by the Lounge Riviera bandstand to say hello and this-and-that to Jimmy Nichols, who infuses his every song with hundred per cent romance . . . Bonnie Boyd has been in the Mayflower Lounge since away last fall. But it isn't only because of her singing. Notice her little-girl smile? . . . Jeanne Rose, of El Patio, has the gracious pose of a prima donna when she rises to sing. Perhaps it's because of her operatic training . . . That unaffected off-hand manner of Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, is one reason she's one of the town's most popular singers. A lass who doesn't take herself too seriously . . . And you'll enjoy the fiery personality of the mysterious new Mexican singer at the Silver Fox. She's a "tropicana lady."

ON THE WAY UP is Rodd Raffell's Band at the Nightingale, say expert musicians who are emphatic in their appreciation of its fresh and modern handling of both melody and rhythm. Young Maestro Raffell makes most of those special arrangemen's that delight the 'Gale fans.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on his vacation his column is being written by other members of The Post sports staff.)

By Bill Ackerman

Out on the salt flats of Utah it is sandboating, at Daytona and Sea Island it is sand sailing, but on the Mediterranean beaches and with the Royal Air Force in Egypt, the newest sport is land-yachting. Regardless of what it is called—it is fun.

ACKERMAN

You've probably guessed, by this time, it is another adaptation of sail-power—the wedding of ages-old sailboating and the medium by which the same sport is transferred to the ice in the winter. The resulting progeny, if what we hear is true, is five years old and gaining adherents every day. It is faster, by far, than sailboating, but slower, in about the same ratio, than ice-boating.

It can, at times, be calm, staid, and even relaxing. With light winds and long, wide expanses of hard-packed beach oldsters take it in full stride, and like it. When Old Boreas, the north wind, gets in a huff, however, it is something else. Sand-sailing becomes exciting—with all sorts of possibilities, and thrills that will raise the blood pressure of teen-agers.

Taken from ice-sailing, is the structure of the "boat." Tubular steel frame in the recognized T formation, but with rubber-tired wheels in place of the ice-runners. From there, the rig reverts to sailing, for the standing rigging is what you will find on boats anywhere.

True, there is a modern trend, in the adaption of bright colors in the sails, but otherwise it is the old "leg-o-mutton," or the later Marconi sail—sometimes with an added "jigger" or steadying sail and even the old tried gaff-headed mainsail one and all, however, taken from sailing rigs.

These land-boats will not sail so close into the wind as will their water-borne parents, but close-hauled they will heel over in much the same manner, and with conditions right and a seasoned mate, that is where the fun starts.

But, is sand-sailing a new sport? Let's take a gander back through the years. We'll wager, that there is hardly anyone who has lived along the coast who cannot remember many weird contraptions using wheels and the wind to get over the ground.

In our younger days, along the south Jersey beaches, we called them sail-wagons. And, that's just what they were. Often with no two of the four wheels alike. Any youngster with an understanding parent, or affluent enough to afford bicycle wheels, was eagerly sought out with offers to help for the building, or of nondescript sails to propel the finished "wagon"—for the chance of riding the wind.

Neither were sail-wagons built only by the very young, for the skippers of the inlet mosquito fleet, in the winter, transferred their huge No. 3 sails to wheels and joined the fun, when a northeaster was blowing; but on the hard-packed beach, for the easy-riding, narrow boardwalk of Atlantic City's uptown section was not roomy enough for the big fellows, with speeds that were estimated to be in excess of 50 miles an hour.

But, those patchwork wagons of the boys weren't so slow, only in comparison with those of the elders, for careening down the 20-foot-wire planks, with sails sheeted-in to the bursting point, dodging pedestrians and benches, the pipe-standards of the rails were often just a long blur, and wrecks, which occurred often, were sometimes attended with not only sore heads, but occasionally broken bones.

So, land-sailing isn't such a new sport, but just coming into its own because of better wheels and tires, and the races, or regattas, of the British in Egyptian deserts, with their four-wheeled wagons, very similar to our early ones, only numbered and named, and flying club pennants, instead of our makeshifts of 40 years ago, is the modernization of an old sport. But a grand sport, nevertheless; one we believe will continue to flourish—try it at Daytona or on the 5-mile stretch of sand at the Cloister on Sea Island, Georgia, and we have the idea you will like it, too.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 4.—The appointment of Elmer Layden as the czar of pro football is a notable step in the progress of that game. He is a competent man who commands respect. At the moment he may not know more about pro ball than poor Carl Storck, the pro football fan who serves as president of the National Football League. But Layden will have the extraordinary or czarist powers for which Storck, who has been around for 20 years, could only pine. Layden will make a good man for the pro game and should bring to it the cohesion without which it will always remain a bush-league, bickering organization or warring hams.

CONSIDINE

We think that one of his first acts of office, although his $20,000 a year salary will be paid in the immediate future by the National Football League, should be to bring the American Football League under his thumb. We think there is room for two big leagues in the game and that San Francisco and Los Angeles should be included in the big league pro football picture. A good opening splice in the union of the currently glowering National and American Leagues would be an annual game played between the respective league winners in California or Florida as a post-season feature. We saw the post-season game btween the Chicago Bears and a nonedescript all star pro team about a month ago in Los Angeles and, under Tom Gallery's promotion, it was a complete sellout. It proved nothing. A playoff game between the two leagues would be a much more notable attraction.

While we're on the topic we think that one of the reasons why Layden should extend his control to the American League is to check (in advance) such stories as the ridiculous one to the effect that the football Yankees have offered John Kimbrough $37,500 to play for them in 1941. Stories like that destroy the confidence of the customers in a league, for most customers are wily enough to know that they are being hamstrung. We happened to be a kind of middle man between the American League and Tommy Harmon and know all that Tommy was offered by Douglas Herts, of the Yankees, was $7,500 plus $5,000 as a member of Herts' organization and the promise of an effort to get him on the radio. If Harmon thus seemed worth only $12,500. Kimbrough, who hasn't had one fifth the publicity (nor has he generated one-tenth the appeal) certainly wasn't offered $37,500.

While we're on the topic of Layden, it reminds us of another prominent Notre Dame figure, Greg Rice. After Greg won the 2-mile event at the Millrose games the other night at the Garden, with a tremendous last lap spurt which saw him pound around those final boards faster probably than any man in the audience could have run (even though starting fresh at that late point in the race) we heard an A. A. U. official remark casually that Rice was "handicapped" by a double hernia.

We couldn't believe it, so we went down to the locker room to investigate. He was sick at the moment, as are many of these runners after they race (they all say that it is the cigarette and cigar smoke in the Garden that upsets them) but after a while he appeared, smiling wanly, and readily verified the hernia story. Even showed us the two braces he wears all the time, including during his tremendous races.

"I've had them since I was a baby," the small, powerful, friendly young man volunteered. "Played high school football with them, without trouble. I've been to three good doctors and they've all told me that it won't hurt me to continue running. Something about the forward motion of the body, not hurting. The only danger is that I'll be knocked down, knocked off stride. That would be bad. Yes, very bad."

Memories of the baseball writers' dinner: Quentin Reynolds' tribute to Lou Gehrig (Quent compared him to that courageous Englishman who patiently removed the 1,000-pound time bomb from the crater in front of St. Paul's) . . . Bobby Feller's stout defense of his Cleveland teammates, and his nicely turned little speech, which made us marvel at the way the kid has smartened up since that first day he came to New York, not so long ago, and naively asked us what kind of zoo the town had . . . Bob Quinn's expostulating love of the game . . . wondering why Clark Griffith, one of the two or three most important men in baseball history, hasn't been honored by the New York writers . . . Jack Mahon's interpretation of Jimmy Wilson stealing second base, and the world's funnist trio—Jack White, Pat Harrington and Frank Hyers.

Atlantic City Gets First Four Goals, Staves Off Rally Before 2,247 Fans

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Eagles' season-long grip on the Eastern Amateur Hockey League lead was reduced to a mere finger hold last night when the Atlantic City Sea Gulls dealt the locals their fourth straight loss in a riotous match at Riverside Stadium. The score was 5-3.

The Eagles might be on the threshold of dropping into second place, but at least they got that way in the most exciting match that Riverside ever housed. A crowd of 2,247 paying fans saw everything in the books last night, including a near record total of 16 penalties, the spectacle of the Atlantic City goalie being penalized for striking a Washington player, and picayunish fights galore. In addition, in the second period the Gulls scored twice in 11 seconds and the Eagles tallied a like number in 34 seconds.

Gulls Fight Rally

The Gulls, scoring twice in the first period and another pair early in the second stanza, fought off a three-goal Washington rally late in the second session and held onto their slim lead during the hectic finale until they clinched the decision with a goal by Jim Russell, a newcomer, at 18:50.

Washington had numerous chances to win in the third period, among them a free shot awarded the Eagles because Goalie Lyle Porter struck Roy McBride amid skirmishing before the visitors' net. Porter, however, blocked Burns' shot and thereby capped what was one of the best goal-tending performances seen here.

During the third period every player on both teams and even Referee Harwood were on the ice and in the center of flying sticks. Harwood received a nasty tumble when blocked by two rival players and later was struck on the head as was Gordon Pranschke of Washington, and Dick Dixon of Atlantic City. Harry Dick, the Gulls' defenseman, was fighting throughout the match with different Eagles, notably Pranschke and Ross Knipfel.

A Penalty Parade

In a first period that developed into a 20-minute long parade to the penalty box, the Sea Gulls started the Eagles toward a fourth straight defeat by shooting ahead, 2-0.

With Referee Harwood banishing eight players, four on each side, for minor infractions, the play was slow and ragged and the crowd responded by booing lustily some of the decisions.

After each team had muffed a scoring opportunity provided by numerical superiority, Atlantic City picked up its first goal on a strange play. From a heated scrimmage behind the Washington nets, "Dunk" Gailbraith, one of two debuting Gulls, emerged with the puck and slipped around the nets to shoot it past Goalie Hemming. Referee Harwood shook his head as if to indicate no goal, but then after con-

Crowley Leads Quest For Layden's N.D. Job

New Pro Commisioner May Help Choose Successor; Shaw, Smith, Boland Also Prominently Mentioned

By the United Press

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Another of Notre Dame's immortal "Four Horsemen" of the golden 20's—Fordham's Jimmy Crowley—today topped an almost endless list of candidates for the coaching job relinquished by Elmer Layden, new commissioner of the National Football League.

Layden's resignation threw open a position virtually all Notre Dame men dream about. A roll call of candidates reads like a page from Notre Dame's past football history—Buck Shaw, Clipper Smith, Jimmy Phelan, Adam Walsh, Gus Dorais, Marty Brill and a host of others.

CROWLEY

"We expect to have our man—one man for the post of coach and athletic director—by March 1," said the Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, Notre Dame's president. "Naturally I shall be guided by recommendations the faculty board makes."

Layden is not a member of the board but frequently in his seven years as athletic director he has attended board meetings.

Crowley may be offered the post, although his reported Fordham salary of $15,000 is about $5,000 more than the Irish job is worth. His Rams lost one game during the regular season and lost by 1 point to Texas A. and M. in the Cotton Bowl New Year's Day.

Al Blozis Enters National A. A. U. Indoor Shot Put

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 4.—Al Blozis, of Georgetown, who holds the indoor and outdoor national A. A. U. and intercollegiate shot put titles as well as the N. C. A. A. crown, filed his entry today for the indoor National A. A. U. track and field championships February 22 at Madison Square Garden.

The 247-pounder, indoor record-holder at 55 feet 8¾ inches, put the shot 55 feet 6 inches in his first competitive effort of the season last night and did it with only a week's training.

Hoyas Team to Run

Georgetown's mile relay team will participate in the Boston A. A. games at the Boston Garden this Saturday, Coach Hap Hardell announced yesterday. He will pick his quartet from Jim Fish, Mort Alnwick, Charles Williams, Ken Lyden, Pete McAtee and Charley Newmeyer.

The Hoyas have won once this year and finished third twice.

Hoya Quintet Risks Streak At Syracuse

A capacity crowd of 5,000 is expected to jam Archbold gym in Syracuse to see the Hoyas, rapidly becoming one of the East's most outstanding quintets, perform against the in-and-out Syracuse five.

Chief local interest will be focused on Brookland gymnasium, where Catholic U. will try for its first victory of the season after six defeats. The Cardinals play host at 8:15 to Washington College in a game which will knock the Baltimore five out of the Mason-Dixon Conference playoff if Coach Fod Cotton's men come through with that long-sought victory.

American University, with its high scoring star, Hugo (Dutch) Schulze, will take on Randolph-Macon at the A. U. gymnasium at 8 o'clock.

Terps On Top

Meanwhile, Maryland University will make its next-to-last journey of the season. The Terps go to Annapolis this afternoon fresh from a 49-22 defeat at the hands of North Carolina to take on the late-blooming Middies of the United States Naval Academy. Maryland hops down to Charlottesville, Va., tomorrow to meet Virginia and comes home Saturday night to meet Washington and Lee.

The Hoyas' stop tonight at Syracuse is the first leg of a road trip which will see them face Colgate tomorrow night at Hamilton, N. Y., and Yale Saturday night at New Haven.

George Washington, idle tonight, is working hard in preparation for the difficult second semester schedule it faces. The Colonials meet Furman on Saturday at Riverside

Jeffra Title Fight at Uline May Be Killed

Turner Plans to Call Off Archibald's Date Feb. 18 if Managers Won't Accept Terms

By Al Hailey

Contracts for the Harry Jeffra-Joey Archibald 15-round featherweight championship fight scheduled for February 18 at Uline's arena will be torn up unless both managers agree to a cut in their percentages, Promoter Joe Turner announced last night.

Archibald, boxing's No. 1 hard-luck character, was knocked out Monday night in his home town, Providence, R. I., by Larry Bolvin, and as far as Turner is concerned that knockout all but knocks the pending Jeffra-Archibald fight right out of Uline's new ice palace.

He is willing to promote the fight, however, if managers of the two fighters are willing to accept 50 per cent of the net profits, Turner said, but the fight in all probability would be moved into his Fourteenth and W Streets arena, which has a capacity of 3,000.

Call for 55 Per Cent

Contracts for the fight are now on file with the District Boxing Commission which stipulate that 55 per cent of the profits shall go to the fighters—37½ per cent to Jeffra, Baltimore's champion, and 17½ per cent to Archibald as the challenger.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez yesterday opened negotiations with Max Waxman, Jeffra's manager, and Al Weill, Archibald's manager, in an attempt to work out an agreement.

Turner accused Weill of a breach of contract in going through with the Bolvin fight in Providence, insisting that once a fighter has signed for a championship bout he automatically is prohibited from engaging in fight until after the title affair.

"We didn't know anything about the Bolvin fight until a few days ago," Turner said. Weill, in a telephone conversation, said he had signed for the Bolvin battle before signing contracts to fight Jeffra here.

"Joey was the victim of one of the lousiest counts I've ever seen in boxing," Weill lamented. "He was doing okay and in good shape and he came off the floor at the count of nine, but for some reason the referee called him out."

Weill said Archibald was dazed by Bolvin in the first round but was just beginning to rally when the disputed knockout came, leading to outbursts of fighting in the proArchibald audience.

Hard luck has dogged the steps of Archibald since he first won the featherweight championship, National Boxing Association version, by beating Leo Rodak in Providence.

Kayoed by Scalzo

After winning the title he was knocked out by Petey Scalzo, current N. B. A. champion, in a non-title match. Then he came to Washington to put up a good fight with Jeffra in a championship fight which was spoiled by a poor decision, calling him the winner.

Archibald, who always has put on a good showing in Washington, later lost his title—New York-California-Maryland version—to Jeffra in a rousing battle in Baltimore. Joey was floored three times by Jeffra but at the finish of the 15-round affair he was coming back fast and actually taking the fight away from the Baltimorean.

Turner, who figured a third Archibald-Jeffra fight would fill Uline's 8,000 seats, now has a different view, however. The local promoter said he would have to clear a net gate of $5,000 to show any reasonable profit at Uline's because of the $750 rental problem.

Lou Brix, Aide To Tunney and Leonard, Is Dead

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 4.—Lou Brix, well-known fight manager, died today at St. Francis Hospital. He was 49.

Brix was in boxing as a manager for 30 years. At one time he was connected with Billy Gibson in handling Gene Tunney and Benny Leonard. He also managed Paulino Uzcudun, was the man who brought Chilean Heavyweight Contender Arturo Godoy to this country for, the first time, and more recently piloted Sixto Escobar to the bantamweight championship.

Brix is survived by his wife, Tillie; a son, Eddie, an engineer in Puerto Rico; a daughter, Mrs. Leslie McMahon, of Rifton, N. Y., and his parents.

4 Brown Rookies Sign Contracts

St. Louis, Feb. 4 (AP).—With the addition of four rookies, the Browns were 11 up with 29 to go today in signing their players to contracts.

The latest to enter the fold were Loy Hanning, pitcher, and Outfielders Pete Kraus and Jack Bradsher, all of whom played with San Antonio, and Al White, outfielder, from Youngstown, Ohio.

There has been one holdout, Rip Radcliff, veteran outfielder, who was fourth in American League batting last season with an average of .342.

'Open Connivance' Between Gamblers And Ring Body Is Charged in Complaint

By the Associated Press

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 4.—Two State Senators asked the Pennsylvania Legislature today to investigate what they charged is "open connivance" between gamblers and the State athletic commission.

At the same time, they denounced the forthcoming heavyweight title bout between Champion Joe Louis and Gus Dorazio, Philadelphia Italian, as a "flagrant violation of the commission's duty to the public because of the unequal ability of the participants."

Charge Gamblers Control Ring

Senators H. Jerome Jaspan and Anthony J. Disilvestro, Philadelphia Democrats, charged in their legislative resolution that "gambling interests more or less control boxing in Philadelphia with the knowledge of Commission Chairman Leon L. Rains."

They asserted that "fighters physically unfit for athletic contests have been ordered to participate over the order of physicians, for the profit of promoters and in some instances for the profit of professional gamblers.

At his Philadelphia office, Rains retorted that "Jaspan is after me because I refused him complimentary tickets." The chairman said that boxing in Philadelphia is now in its healthiest condition.

Louis-Dorazio Denounced

The Louis-Dorazio bout, scheduled for February 17 in Philadelphia, is "an imposition on the public and should be called off, Jaspan told the Legislature. "It will be suicide for Dorazio."

Rains, a former boxing promoter himself, replied that "Dorazio is as good as any of the present crop of heavyweights. He's beaten Al McCoy and Bob Pastor, both of whom lost to Louis, and he dropped a split decision to Clarence Burman who was knocked out by Louis last Friday."

National League's Owners Unite to Battle Landis' Edict

Rule Hits Major, Minor Loop Tie-up

Landis' Ultimatum Aimed to Halt Return Of Players to Minors After Major Purchases

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 4.—The eight members of the National League united unanimously today in opposition to the latest edict from Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis against return of players to the minor leagues after they have been purchased by major league clubs.

Still adhering to the secrecy which has surrounded the latest bulletin of the commissioner since it was issued January 21, the league did not disclose its action officially, but it was learned that a committee composed of Branch Rickey, of the St. Louis Cardinals; Warren Giles, of the Cincinnati Reds, and Leo Bondy, of the New York Giants, was appointed to draft a resolution to be presented to Landis expressing the opposition of the major league club owners to his ruling.

The ultimatum that has drawn the ire of some of the clubs says that a player purchased by a big league club while he is subject to draft may not be returned to the minors on option unless waivers are obtained from all the other major league teams.

Giants Exempt

There was some question as to the extent of the rule's effect on the National League members. The Giants said none of their players would be affected, but the Chicago Cubs said four of their players fell in the class of the ruling.

One of the latter is Lou Stringer, star second baseman for Los Angeles, of the Pacific Coast League, last year. He is a valuable ballplayer potentially, but the Cubs at present have Billy Herman, probably the best second baseman in the league, and normally would consider optioning Stringer to a class AA minor league club.

However, it now would be necessary for the Cubs to ask for waivers and some rival like the Giants or Phillies very likely would put in a claim at the draft price of $7,500. Then Chicago either would have to withdraw the waiver request and keep him on its bench or let him go at a considerable loss to a rival club.

Adopt "Bean" Helmet

The National League representatives said they realized that Landis was undertaking to avert abuse of the practice of placing a ball player on a major league roster to keep him from being drafted by some other major league club, but they felt the regulation as now stated was not only impractical, but usurped the clubs' powers to make their own rules.

The league adopted a helmet for batters which all the clubs will try out in spring training. It was invented by Dr. George Bennett, of Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore and League President Ford Frick said it was guaranteed to prevent fractures. Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, said he would make wearing one compulsory for his players, but other club executives said their players would be given the option of wearing one or not.

The league adopted its 1941 schedule opening April 15 and closing September 28 with seven night games at home for all clubs except Boston and Chicago.

Squabble Settled

Seattle, Feb. 4 (AP).—Officials of the Seattle Rainers and William (Bill) Skiff, field supervisor of the New York Yankees, reached a quick agreement today over terms under which Skiff will manage the Pacific Coast League champions.

The Gulls boosted their advantage to 2-0 at 17:04 when each team had only four players due to penalties, Dick Dixon storming the full length of the ice to ram in a spectacular shot.

With a change of pace that was incredible, the match blossomed forth in the second period as a rip roarin' affair. Atlantic City, scoring two goals in 11 seconds, apparently was putting the finishing touches on the Eagles when, before you could say Christorfordis, Washington pulled a Dr. Jekyl-Mr. Hyde.

Three goals in 2 minutes and 9 seconds, the fighting Washington team poured through Goalie Porter, two of them in 34 seconds, and with an exhibition of their best team work, the Eagles blazed back in the running, with the count at 3-4.

Early in the period the fans started to chant "We want McTeer." Soon the big Washington defenseman entered the game and immediately was the victim of bad luck when the Sea Gulls put across their two goals in 11 seconds. The first, made by Pozzo, slid beneath McTeer's body as he fell to the ice to stop it. And the second, credited to Webster, glanced in the cage off McTeer's stick.

Eagles Stage Comeback

Then it was that the Eagles staged their relentless comeback. McBride tallied the first of their three goals, at 13:17 with Burrage assisting. Rossignol made the second, Burrage again assisting at 13:51, and Pranschke followed with a marker on a pass from Courteau at 15:36.

Nats' Acquisition of MacFayden Seen as Smart Move by Griffith

Former Yank Star Is Expected to Prove Help To Washington Club

By Whitney Martin

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Feb. 4.—Danny MacFayden will be pitching baseball for the Washington Senators this year, and the snap judgment of many a fan probably has Clark Griffith classified as slightly balmy for signing this National League pensioner.

Griffith wasn't nicknamed "The Old Fox," however, because he couldn't tell a bargain from a can of corn, and not far beneath the surface are sound reasons for the acquisition of the 34-year-old right hander, and No. 1 among the reasons is the success Griffith has enjoyed with another reformed National Leaguer.

Dutch had been up with Brooklyn for four years, but hadn't had any luck to speak of, and besides that, every time he threw a ball a catcher would howl like he'd hit his finger with a hammer. That knuckler sure wrecked the receivers.

Anyway, he was shipped to Atlanta in 1936, and that's where Griffith found him. In 1939 he won 20 and lost 8 for the Nats, and last year his record was 14 wins against 19 defeats, not too good, of course, but neither were the Senators.

It's rumored now that the Yankees would like to make a deal for Leonard. In fact, the deal might be made in self-defense. Dutch on occasion has been a tough cookie for the Yankees with his dipsie-doodler, and what he does to bats is a caution. They could save in broken bats alone enough to pay his salary.

Considering the luck he had with Leonard, it's highly possible that Griffith reasoned that just because McFayden couldn't get them out fast enough in the National League was no reason why he couldn't get anybody out anywhere.

It might be pointed out right here that Danny originally was good old American League stock, but he'd been away from that circut long enough to live it down. He served most of his American League time with the Red Sox, finally being shifted over to the Yankees before being pushed off into the National League.

He Rewarded Bees

The Reds got him on option from the Yanks, then returned him with thanks, and the Boston Bees immediately jumped in and got him on waivers.

Danny was a good pitcher with the Bees for three years, with an earned run average never higher than three. He slipped a little in 1939, and after the season went to Pittsburgh in a deal for Pitcher Bill Swift and cash.

He was no ball of fire last year, and Frankie Frisch figured you can't win many pennants with 50-50 pitchers, so away Danny went, apparently to spend his declining baseball years in pasture.

The Senators have given him a new lease on life, however, and there is more than a bare chance that his fluffy "stuff," combined with the wisdom of years and the fact that American League batters haven't had a look at him in seven years, might make him a valuable addition to the Washington staff.

And even if he doesn't make the grade, it wouldn't be a poor business deal on Griffith's part. He couldn't get him much cheaper than for nothing.

Yank's 'Kid Infield' Ordered to Report

The Yankee office announced today that Marse Joe had ordered First Baseman Johnny Sturm, Second Baseman Gerry Priddy, Shortstop Phil Rizzuto and Third Baseman Buddy Blair to report at the St. Petersburg, Fla., training camp February 23.

Ray Mucha Signs With Grid Yanks

New York, Feb. 4 (INS).—Rudy Mucha, the University of Washington's all-American center, has agreed to play with the New York Yankees of the American Professional Football League, owner Douglas Hertz announced today.

Mucha will sign a contract for the 1941 season next Friday, Hertz said, explaining that the hefty pivot man had decided to accept the Yanks' offer rather than that of Cleveland in the National League, where he was drafted.

Regiment Meet Slate of 24 Events Listed

By the Associated Press

A track and field program listing two dozen events for intercollegiate, interscholastic, A. A. U. and athletes in military service was arranged yesterday for the annual University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment indoor games at the armory in Baltimore March 7.

Geary Eppley, games committee vice chairman, said entries would be accepted until February 26 and that invitations already had gone out to several individuals, athletic clubs and colleges in the East.

In order to speed up the evening finals, officials said preliminaries in sprints and hurdles would be run off in the afternoon, with field events getting under way at 6:30 p. m.

Three Features

As in past years, three feature events are on the program—the Governor's Mile, the Oriole 660 and the 2-mile Miss and Out. Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor has donated a silver Bowl, Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore a gold-finished vase for the Oriole 660 winner and a sterling silver plate will be awarded the 2-mile winner.

These trophies may be retired permanently by athletes winning the event twice, or to the contestant making the best time over a three-year period.

In 1939, Jack Munski, of Missouri, retired the Governor's Trophy, negotiating the mile in 4:13.5, and in 1940 Archie San Romani, unattached, won in 4:16.1.

Goldberg Has Leg

Sanford Goldberg, of the Millrose Athletic Club, New York, has one leg on the Jackson Vase by winning the Oriole 660 last year, while Tommy Deckard, unattached, went home with the 2-mile plate by racing to a record 9:05.9.

INTERCOLLEGIATE — 70-yard sprint, 440-yard dash, 880-yard run, mile run, classified mile relays and half-mile Mason-Dixon Conference relay.

INTERSCHOLASTIC — 70-yard sprint, 1,000-yard run, high jump, Maryland Interscholastic Association mile relay, classified mile relays and half-mile Maryland County High School relay.

A. A. U. INVITATION—70-yard sprint, 70-yard high hurdles, 1,000-yard run handicap, 16-pound shot put, high jump, pole vault, 2-mile miss-and-out classified mile relays.

ARMED SERVICE, U. S. A.—70-yard sprint, half-mile relay and half-mile intercompany relay, closed to members of Fifth Regiment.

Kovacs and Riggs Lead Advance in South Florida Play

By the United Press

West Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 4.—Bobby Riggs, former national amateur champion from Chicago, today eked out a 3-6, 6-3, 8-6, victory over Bob Decker, of Miami, to lead seeded players through the second round of the South Florida tennis championships.

Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., winner of four successive Florida titles this winter, won a 6-1, 6-4 triumph over Richard Harris, West Palm Beach.

Other favored stars to advance included Jack Kramer, of Montebello, Calif.; Elwood Cooke, Portland, Oreg.; Ed Alloo, Rollins College; Wayne Sabin, Los Angeles; Hal Surface, Kansas City; Bitsy Grant, Atlanta; Dick McKee, Miami Beach, and Gus Ganzenmuller, Chicago.

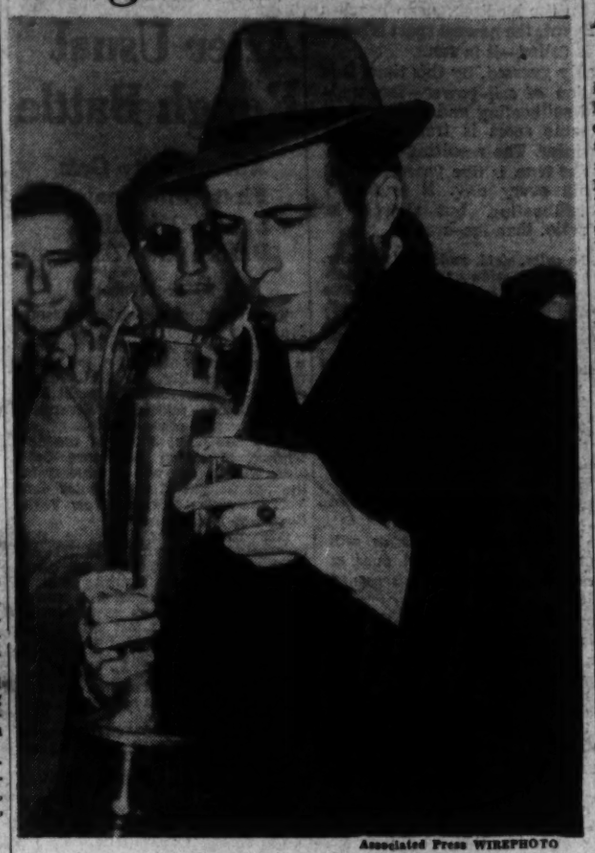
Haight Goes South



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:

There's one thing you get with these letters, Boss, and that's variety. If memory serves I have written about turtles, pelicans, old maids, traffic, Jake, weather, blood transfusions and, lest we forget, that poem on fishing. Well, Boss, our lesson for today is found under the letter "T" in the sports curriculum. (Not a bad word for a guy who couldn't get out of the third semester at Business High School). Well, I'm going to write about tennis. For years I thought I had been born allergic to tennis. In fact the easiest way to become an outcast in our gang, the Little Potatoes (We're Hard to Peel), was to play tennis. I often wondered if my mother would have recognized me had the boys around my way caught me carrying a racket. Around the sports department I learned to put up with tennis in a professional sort of way, but, somehow, I always suspected those who played the game.

HAIGHT

I can remember when Shirley Povich and I were getting out The Post sport pages and one day Shirley said, "We've got to get another man and I'm thinking about hiring Bob Considine. What do you think?" I replied, "Bob's a nice enough fellow. He comes from a good family and all that, but he's a tennis player and I just can't imagine a tennis player doing the little odd jobs around here." Well, Boss, I was plenty wrong. Bob did everything asked and everything not asked. Although he started at a reporter's salary, Considine probably was the best copy boy we ever had in sports. I have no misgiving about tennis or tennis players now. I have tried the game and I can tell you how misleading "40-love" can be on a court. Also, I have many friends in Washington's tennis colony.

Perhaps you have been wondering what all this is leading up to—well, it's to a young man named Frank Kovacs, who has been parading to victory in the big-time tennis being played in Florida. I went out the other day to see Kovacs polish off Bobby Riggs. If you have never seen this California boy in action you haven't seen the oddest brand of tennis in captivity. He is a combination of Sliding Billy Watson, Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, Martha Ray and the Ritz Brothers rolled into one. He says anything and does anything and he generally does and says what he is doing the wrong way.

Two weeks ago, Everett Clay, sports editor of the Miami Herald, wrote a long piece advising Kovacs to cut out the comedy and get down to serious tennis. Well, Clay has been converted. He has seen Kovacs play the galleries and the Nation's best players and win over both. Since, Clay has written a piece taking back everything he said about Kovacs. "It would be as difficult, methinks, for Kovacs to play a straight court game as to open a can of beer with a pair of scissors," wrote the Miamian. Well, Boss, Kovacs crosses every line of type in the tennis book. He carries on a running conversation with his opponent and when his opponent won't listen he swaps yarns with someone in the gallery. At one stage of his match with Bobby Riggs he talked to himself, the ball boys, officials and spectators. At another point, he even conversed with persons outside the fence. Some golfers were over on the fifth tee, which is not far from the stands. One of them yelled, "That was a great shot," as Kovacs made a placement. The California boy shouted, "You said it, kid!"

He is certainly a shot in the arm for amateur tennis. He has more color than a Neon sign. One minute he imitates Napoleon and the next he poses behind the strings in a benefit for the President's Birthday Fund in their first post-examination engagement. Then they really get busy. On Monday they meet Maryland at the S. G. Loeffler plant, Wednesday they travel down to Annapolis to play Navy and on Thursday they hop back to Riverside to entertain West Virginia.

Coach Bill Reinhart is pushing the squad at a fast pace to get the boys into top shape for this string of games. Prior to their layoff for exams, the Colonials won 11 games and lost 3, and Reinhart hopes they will continue at this rate.

The fifth starting post at George Washington still is unsettled. Joe Gallagher, the St. John's Prep flash, has been showing great improvement the past month and may move into this spot which Eddie Amencola and Charley Jones have shared most of the season.

Roy McNeil, the former Roosevelt High player, is also in this fight and cannot be counted out. Thus Reinhart is in the nice position of having four players of about equal ability scrambling for this berth.

Joe Comer, Matt Zunic, Lou Veltri and Bobby Gilham seem assured of the other four starting positions.

The Colonials expect trouble from Furman. Down at Greenville, S. C., recently the Purple Hurricane five gave G. W. a tremendous battle before bowing by a 37-36 margin.

Anacostia vs. Tech; Roosevelt vs. Wilson, Tech gym, 7:30 p. m.

By Bill Burnett

Slapping down an upstart Woodrow Wilson High five that made what was supposed to be a walkaway a terrific battle, the White Tide of Eastern yesterday tied Roosevelt for the public school basketball lead with a 27-22 judgment.

The victory, achieved before a packed gym at Roosevelt, came in the first half of an afternoon double-header. In the nightcap Central, most unpredictable of series teams, kept alive a faint chance of getting in the title playoff with a 19-17 margin over Western after a tight clash.

Though Central's triumph was the most exciting, resulting from a gym-length hurl by Zello Lagos with 15 seconds left to play, it could hardly steal the show from Wilson's valiant effort and Eastern's fine comeback in the opener.

Hostilities got under way as anticipated, with the Tide running up an 8-3 lead going into the second quarter. That was as far as the game fulfilled expectations, however. With a torrid rush, Wilson, with some of the neatest "pot" shots this year, got back in the running with 10 straight points before Eastern could score again. At intermission, Wilson still rested on a 13-12 lead.

Eastern's big and decisive quarter was the third. It registered 11 points to Wilson's 6 and that was approximately its final margin. Late in the final period, Wilson cut its deficit to a mere 25-22 when Don Hillock rammed a one-handed throw through, but a late set shot by Neil Craig sealed matters.

Except for a couple of foul points, Wilson's scoring was done by Eddie Polhamus and Hillock alone. The first half had 12 points, all on lightning-like set shots, and Hillock accounted for 8. Six players contributed to the Tide's total, Capone coming out on top with 9 points.

Central and Western did most of their playing with the score tied, or with less than three points separating. After one quarter Western had worked up a 3-2 lead, but at the half it was 8-all.

Western had a 12-8 advantage soon after the start of the third period, but the Vikings' turn at the rim put them out front, 14-12, going into the last period. Then began the real seesaw.

Eight points by DiBlasi led the scoring of both teams, and Mitchell was next with seven. Western depended mostly on single-pointers, making good on 7 out of 10 tries. Central's record was 5 in 11.

2. Maurice (Clipper) Smith, Villanova.

3. Joe Boland, Layden's first assistant. Well versed in the system which won 47, lost 13 and tied 3 for Layden in seven years.

Two who might have received first consideration are out of the running. Frank Leahy, only two years at Boston College, put the Eagles in the Cotton Bowl the first year and the Sugar Bowl his second, defeating Tennessee in a thriller January 1. He has signed a five-year contract.

Dr. Eddie Anderson, of Iowa, one of two to defeat the Irish last year, has a medical school tieup at Iowa City and has said he "isn't interested."

Here are a few who probably will be discussed:

Wright T.K.O.'s Rahn

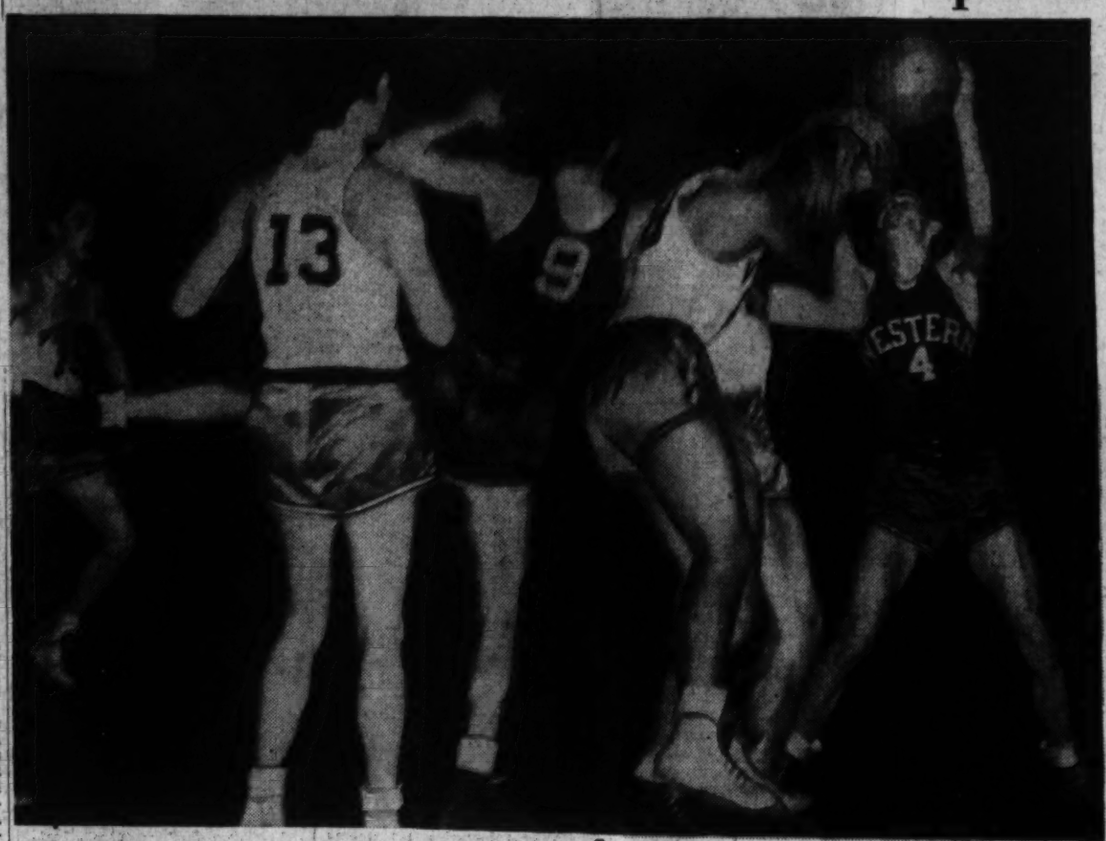
Raider Gets Futile Assist—Block Helps Eastern Get Ball



Left—Though Hal Mitchell (9), Western center, is trying to help out, Donny Cross seems to have the ball and situation well in hand in this shot of public school cage action yesterday. Central's Charley Kligman (13), Teddy Thomaides and another player are in the melee. Below—Capone, of Eastern, goes high into the air to take the ball from Appel, Wilson reserve, in the other half of the twin bill. Schulman and Pigott block out Polhamus and Lemerise. Riders Smash Blair Behind Howard, 55-23

Young Center Scores 17 Points; Silver Spring Five Suffers 10th Loss Of Season on Home Court

Roosevelt High's metropolitan basketball champions did nothing to ruin Montgomery Blair's string of losses yesterday, pounding out a 55-23 triumph with two teams seeing action on the Silver Spring floor.

As the losers were suffering from their tenth setback in 13 games, Tom Howard, youthful center of the Riders, put on a scoring display that few schoolboys have bettered here this year. He rang up 17 points. Frankie Ciango and Hymie Perlo, the team's customary stars, were held to 7 and 11 points, respectively, in the time they played.

For one half the game was fairly close, Roosevelt owning only a 26-14 lead at intermission, but the difference was gradually boosted from there on. Blair's high scorer was Ford Kelley, who managed to get three field goals.

Colorado Lad, Ace Of English Turf, To Train at Downs

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 4.—Colorado Lad, sensation of the English turf last season, will receive his initial American training at Churchill Downs, Tom Young, track superintendent, announced today.

The British 3-year-old, which arrived at Boston yesterday, is en route to Lexington, Ky., where he will be quartered at Thomas Garr Platt's farm until he is ready to start prepping for midsummer tests.

E. F. Woodward, master of Valdina Farms and purchaser of Colorado Lad, reported today he had signed Roscoe Goose, well-known trainer, to handle the horse at Lexington until Valdina's regular trainer, J. J. Flanigan, is finished with Woodward's Santa Anita campaigners.

Illinois Wrestlers Defeat V. M. I., 21-3

Lexington, Va., Feb. 4 (AP).—University of Illinois wrestlers failed to score a fall against V. M. I. today, but captured seven of eight bouts by decision to win, 21 to 3.

The Illini showed their chief strength in heavier classes, winning these matches by decisive advantages with one exception. That was the 175-pound class, in which Steve Swift, V. M. I. captain, extended Paul Govedare to the limit before losing on points, 13 to 9. Each man scored a near fall in the first three minutes.

Wisconsin Cageman Scholastic Casualty

Madison, Wis., Feb. 4 (AP).—Ray Lenheiser, of Rhinelander, sophomore forward on the University of Wisconsin basketball team, has been declared ineligible for further competition this year because he failed to meet scholastic standards, the athletic department announced today.

Other members of the Badger squad were believed to have survived midsemester tests but some of the final grades will not be available until Saturday.

Temple Bows, 48-45

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 4 (AP).—Bradley Tech, repulsing a late rally by the invading Temple quintet, defeated the highly-ranked Easterners tonight, 48 to 45.

Overcoming an early 4-0 deficit, Bradley outscored Temple the rest of the first half in a skin-tight battle, and led at intermission by 25-22.

Grobmier Back On Arena Mat Card Thursday

Promoter Joe Turner is bringing back that lanky Southwestern farmer, Fred Grobmier, exponent of the figure-four scissors, for a 30-minute brawl on tomorrow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena featuring the Green Hornet, mysterious masked grappler, and Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle, of St. Louis.

Grobmier's opponent will be Dick Stahl, Wisconsin athlete, who bowed last week by holding Joe DeValteau, the French refugee wrestler, to a stirring 30-minute draw. Fred whipped Tiger Tasker in his first match after more than a year's absence, and last week won from Eddie Newman, the rough New Yorker.

Thursday's semiwindup will find rough Rudy Dusek, chief of the "Riot Squad," meeting Paul Boesch, of California.

Red Brill, a newcomer from California, will engage Milo Steinborn, the Memphis Strong Man, and DeValteau will face Lou Plummer in other 30-minute brawls.

Strickler Tops S. S. Bowlers With 151-421

Harry Strickler, Wolfe Motor, was the best individual roller in the American League at Silver Spring last night, his 151-421 showing the way. Frank Hines' 396 was the reason his Liberty Wall Paper team took high counts for game and set with 662 and 1,787, respectively.

NORTHEAST TEMPLE

The four-boy teams of the Boy Scouts of America rolled with Shepherd, of the Suckers, taking high game with 132. The set went to Salb, Eagles, with 337, which helped his team take top set with 1,251. The Suckers won high team game with 443.

SILVER SPRING

Dot Crawford, Bergmann's Laundry, led the Maryland-D. C. Ladies' League, her second high game of the season of 153 and 356 set topping the others. The Shaffer Flower Shop girls took team highs with 580 and 1,613. Ruth Rothgeb and Dot Crawford are tied for high average with 111 each.

NEW RECREATION

The Elks' League was sparked by Vince Fuschini, Brotherly Love, with a 149 top game, while Red King's 363 count helped his Antlers team to highs of 603-1,676. Band, Brotherly Love, Esquires, Stewards and Justice won all three from opponents. In the Elko League, Miss Warren, Jay Birds, was tops with her 123-305 with the Blue Birds taking high game with 472 as 1,339 sticks won the set for the Eagles.

ARCADIA

Sadie Glanz, Red Arrow, saw to it that her team took high game and set in the Railroad Retirement Board Ladies' meet for her own 137-349 sparked the team to 508 and 1,435, highs for the play. Her 349 set is a season high.

ICE PALACE

"Unk" Treadway, Royal No. 1, had 146-351 to lead the Office Appliance League and pace his team to highs of 584-1,675. IBM No. 2 and Royal No. 2 still lead the loop. "Shoes" Boteler has high average of 117.30 for the league.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Roger Fraley, with 10 points, and Herbert Munhall, with eight shot the freshmen into the lead, while Bob Churchill and Bill Metzger each hoisted six for the Cadets.

Tech Defeats Coolidge Five 2d Time, 24-15

Using 12 players in an effort to find the best combination for future games, Tech High yesterday chalked up its second victory of the season over Calvin Coolidge's quintet, a 24-15 triumph on the losers' court.

Except for a few seconds early in the game, the Manual Trainers led throughout. Their margins at the respective quarters were 3-2, 11-6 and 20-8. Following his usual custom, Jackie Walsh led the winners with 7 points, but Coolidge's Bartlett was high for the game with 9.

Ahearn Set To Return To Ring Game

Goldie Ahearn, who's been observing the ups and downs of the Washington fight business from the sidelines since last fall, can't stand it any longer and is getting ready to plunge back into the picture—this time as a copromoter with the famed Jack Kearns, maybe.

Kearns, Jack Dempsey's old manager, is now formulating plans to promote a series of fights throughout the Nation for the benefit of the British-American Ambulance Corps and has asked Goldie to step in and fix up a "big time" benefit attraction for Washington.

Ahearn announced last night that he never had any intentions of leaving the fight game definitely when he parted company with Ray Alvis at Riverside last fall and that he will go to New York late this week to confer with Kearns.

Goldie's announcement that he planned to get together with Kearns indicates that there'll soon be a merry squabble among the Capital's boxing moguls, for here's what happened yesterday and what will happen tomorrow:

Joe Turner's Matchmaker Gabe Menendez will leave tomorrow for Manhattan to "look into a matter Kearns has written us about."

Thus it appears that the cagey Kearns has lured all three gentlemen to his stamping grounds in an effort to play one against the other.

Corydon, Heavy Choice, Beaten 10 Lengths

Sirasia Wins Feature, Pays $12.70 Price

Choice Is Miserable Failure After Bad Start; High Fidelity Takes Place Money

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 4.—Mrs. Payne Whitney's Corydon, a colt that won Belmont Park's Withers Stake in front of Bimelech last May and then failed to click for the remainder of the season, proved a disappointment again here today. The son of St. Germans, a failure in his lone previous outing here this winter, was installed a $1.70-to-$1 choice over the Class "C" field in the sixth race on this afternoon's card. He finished fifth, beaten ten lengths.

W. C. Stroube's Sirasia ran the mile and three-sixteenths in 1:57, only one-fifth of a second slower than the track mark, to capture the honors by a length and a half. River Divide Farm's High Fidelity was second, a half length before Gustave Ring's Ringie. Sirasia returned $12.70. He recently ran for $5,000 in a claiming affair and finished third.

Corydon met with some trouble early in the running but got clear soon afterward and simply could not make the grade.

Sirasia, Corydon and Ringie are named for the $50,000 Widener Cup.

Ringie began in encouraging fashion. The 3-to-1 second choice led the field into the stretch, disposing of Trimly early. Sirasia went after the pacemaker after Trimly faltered and forged to the front near the eighth pole. He drew away and staved off High Fidelity's belated challenge.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FADE, $4.90, $3.50, $2.50; KIND GESTURE, $11.30, $4.90; FLYING WEST (field), $2.70.

FADE, away fast, took an early lead, but faltered when the real test came and just lasted long enough to withstand KIND GESTURE'S challenge. The latter, a forward contender, but racing greenly, finished strong and would have won in another stride. FLYING WEST continued to bear out all the way and Meade was unable to do her justice. ROSARIEL turned in a creditable effort.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:47. Off 2:48. Winner, G. Ring's br. m. GREENY gradually improved his position after leaving the backstretch while saving ground, cut the corner and came wide, but shook off the leaders and won in hand. BEACH ENSEMBLE, well up all the way, suffered slight interference from the winner, but was beaten at the time. WEISENHEIMER, slow to begin, closed a big gap. LITTLE BOLO stopped as if short. BONZAR was poorly ridden and taken wide turning into the stretch.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG CHANCE, $81.20, $36.30, $19.00; SANDY BOOT, $12.90, $7.40; COUNTERPOISE, $7.50.

BIG CHANCE, setting a fast pace, gradually drew out from his opposition rounding the turn and won in hand. SANDY BOOT, outrun the first 5 furlongs, gained steadily thereafter, but never threatened the winner. COUNTERPOISE, hard ridden, gained steadily while circling the field to wear DOMKIN down in the last strides. DOMKIN, prominent early, faltered in the final eighth.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE LILY, $13.90, $6.70, $5.40; TRAGIC ENDING, $6.20, $4.20; CAPE COD, $4.40.

BLUE LILY took command at once, was rated in front until midway around the turn, then drew out into a winning lead to win in hand. TRAGIC ENDING, in close quarters the early stages, closed gamely when clear and disposed of CAPE COD. The latter, a forward contender, had no excuses. ISOLDE was carried wide all the way. STARRY HOPE broke in a tangle and showed little.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:20. Off at once. Winner, R. W. Collins' b. f. (4), by Lee O. Cotner—Sweeping Willow. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $350; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:17⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWEET WILLOW, $5.70, $3.60, $2.80; ONE WITCH, $3.80, $3.10; BREATHLESS, $3.00.

SWEET WILLOW, going in her top form, displayed high speed and opened up a commanding lead in the early stages, but was taken in hand through the stretch to win with something to spare. ONE WITCH, nearest in pursuit of the pacemaker throughout, finished steadily, but could not get up. BREATHLESS, away tardily and blocked in the early running, ran much better than the chart shows. JEANNE D'ARC faltered in the final furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. The Back Street Grade C. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:50. Off 4:50½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIRASIA, $12.70, $5.80, $4.30; HIGH FIDELITY, $6.70, $3.60; RINGIE, $3.30.

SIRASIA, going in close pursuit of the pace from the start, raced RINGIE into defeat entering the stretch and, responding gamely to pressure, held HIGH FIDELITY safe at the end. HIGH FIDELITY worked his way up steadily and closing with a belated rush made a bold bid. RINGIE set a slow pace while saving ground, but then faltered under his impost in the final drive. TRIMLY had no mishaps. CORYDON was shuffled back entering the backstretch and was never formidable thereafter.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:21. Off 5:22½. Winner, Mrs. W. F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MIGAL FAY, $19.60, $8.50, $4.50; LUCKY ME, $25.10, $8.50; SIR REG, $3.70.

MIGAL FAY, saving much ground and prominent in the early stages, closed gamely entering the stretch while under punishment and drew clear at the end. LUCKY ME, rushed to the front while crossing before the field going to the first turn, then drew clear turning into the backstretch, but could not withstand the winner's bid. SIR REG narrowly escaped going down at the first turn and improved his position steadily to finish fastest of all. FLAG POST weakened in the final drive. JACK STING jumped on one of his opponents' heels and lost his rider.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:52. Off 5:53. Winner, A. C. AL AU FEU worked way to contention on outside and withstood long drive to be up in concluding stride. YES OR NO was in thick of battle from start, came through on inside and fought it out willingly. MARY SCHULZ set good pace and fought it out with good courage. TONY WEAVER was in first flight from start, forced pace and came with good energy at close.

U.S. Aluminum Output Gains 26% in Year

By the Associated Press

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday that 1940 production of primary aluminum exceeded the peak reached in 1939 by 26 per cent and that consumption rose 35 per cent above 1939.

Officials said 1940 production totaled 412,560,000 pounds of new aluminum valued at $75,292,210, compared with 325,090,000 pounds valued at $64,600,000 the year before.

To meet national defense requirements, officials added, aluminum production is expected to exceed 690,000,000 pounds by July, 1941, and 825,000,000 pounds by July, 1942.

Contrary to the trend of many other materials greatly in demand for the rearmament program, the price of aluminum declined 3 cents during 1940 from 20 cents a pound to 17 cents.

Officials attributed the 1940 demand for aluminum chiefly to the high rate of activity in national defense industries, particularly airplane construction.

Expect Flood Of Arms Trade, Bankers Told

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 4.—P. D. Houston, president of the American Bankers Association, told 500 banking executives at the midwinter trust conference of the association today that "within the next four months the defense goods business will descend upon us as if in a flood." Houston, also chairman of the American National Bank in Nashville, Tenn., added:

"Every manufacturing enterprise should be prepared to handle its share of this flood. Perhaps there won't be much profit in it. There may be a lot of discouraging experience with red tape and one might prefer to go on doing business as usual exclusively with his usual customers but participation in the defense program is a patriotic duty.

Carl W. Fenninger, president of the trust division of the A. B. A. and vice president of the Provident Trust Co. of Philadelphia, suggested the broadest possible diversification of investment portfolios of trust funds as the best protection against postwar economic uncertainties.

"The probable lowering of the standard of living in many of the countries now at war," Fenninger said, "and the lower cost of production which is likely to occur will probably present a problem to American industries which may mean a somewhat lower standard of living here and a lower proportion of earnings flowing to the investor."

Your Income Tax

Who Is Head of Family

For income tax purposes there can be only one head of a family. In addition to being the chief financial support, the head of a family must be related by blood, marriage, or adoption to his dependents, and he must have a legal or moral obligation to exercise family control over them and provide for their care. As such he is entitled to the same exemption allowed a married person—$2,000.

There are some unusual cases under this classification. A single person, who supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood, by marriage, or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for them is based upon a legal or moral obligation, is the head of a family, and as such is entitled to the exemption allowed a married person—$2,000. In addition he may claim a credit of $400 for each dependent.

Another example not so much out of the usual is this: A widower who supports in his household his aged mother and his child 17 years of age is the head of a family, and as such is entitled to an exemption of $2,000 and a credit of $800 for two dependents.

Not infrequently a case like this is reported: It involves the support of an indigent adult by a single person who is morally and legally obligated to provide a home for this individual. In such a case the exemption as the head of a family may be allowed—the circumstances of each case are considered in making the determination. If the individual so supported is not financially dependent, even though the taxpayer maintains a common home and furnishes the chief support, the latter may not claim the exemption.

A taxpayer who supports in his home his minor children over whom he exercises family control is classified as the head of a family, even though the children may have an income of their own sufficient for their maintenance. If he does not support them, by reason of their own income, but does exercise family control, he cannot be classified as the head of a family.

Market Teeters Narrowly With Little Action; Rails Keep Balance on Mounting Traffic

New York, Feb. 4—Stocks again encountered selling resistance in today's market after a feeble forenoon rally failed to follow through gains of fractions to a point or so. Then prices began to wilt and, at the close, irregularity was the rule.

The Associated Press average of 60 issues was unchanged at 41.6, the lowest since last August. Dealings were negligible throughout. Transfers dwindled to 352,740 shares for the full proceedings, smallest turnover for a full session since September 16. They compared with 491,165 Monday.

As in the previous session, a little bidding came in on the idea the market was due for a technical rebound after its almost steady retreat since January 10. Business news was moderately cheerful, but brokers still saw offsetting factors in the war, taxes and fears of expanding Government controls.

That private sales of big blocks of securities were still to be considered in speculative circles was shown by the offering of 20,000 shares of duPont at the closing price on the "big board" of 148, where the issue was off 1 point. The stock was said to have come from an estate and was being sold for tax purposes. These off-the-exchange sales involve no commission for buyers.

United States Steel and Bethlehem emerged with gains of ¼ of a point each. Improvement was retained by Santa Fe, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Chrysler, United States Rubber, Goodrich, United Aircraft, American Smelting, International Nickel, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, New York Shipbuilding, Bath Iron Works and Paramount.

Losers included General Electric, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, American Telephone, General Motors, Anaconda, Kennecott, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft and Owens-Illinois.

General Motors was down most of the day as some apparently were a trifle disappointed that directors voted a 75-cent dividend on the common instead of $1 which had been paid in the three preceding quarters.

United States Governments eased in the bond department, but foreign dollar loans did better. Gainers in a spotty Curb were Bell Aircraft, Electric Bond & Share, Humble Oil and Phoenix securities. Lower tendencies were shown by Novadel-Agene, Pennroad and New England Telephone. Volume here was around 79,000 shares versus 87,000 Monday.

Big duPont Block Offered Over-Counter

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—A block of 20,000 shares of E. I. duPont de Nemours common stock was offered privately by a group of dealers headed by Smith Barney & Co. today at $148 a share, the closing price in the New York Stock Exchange. Finanical quarters said the stock came from a domestic estate and was sold for tax purposes.

Bats for Defense? Maker Discounts Idea

"We do not see," he wrote, "that our product would be of particular use in strictly defense work."

Oil Output Mounts

Tulsa, Feb. 4 (AP).—Daily crude oil production in the United States increased 4,420 barrels to 3,594,760 for the week ended February 1, the Oil and Gas Journal said today.

Wheat Rallies, Other Staples At Year's Lows

By the Associated Press

Foodstuffs and industrial raw materials declined yesterday to the lowest levels of the year, the Associated Press staple index disclosed.

The index, based on 1926 as 100 and comprised of 35 wholesale commodities, dropped to 77.30 from 77.47.

A sharp late rally at Chicago put wheat up ¾ to 1 cent a bushel and arrested an eight-day long decline. Buying by shorts was the main force behind the rally. Corn rose ¼ to ¾ of a cent.

Political unsettlement in Cuba stimulated demand for domestic sugar at New York and the market closed unchanged to .02 of a cent up. Also countering the main trend were lead and Straits tin.

Cotton lost 15 to 35 cents a bale, influenced by reports the Administration planned to license exports. Coffee, recently at the highest levels in months, gave way along with wool tops, cocoa, rubber and silk. World sugar, hides and copper were irregular.

Curb Adopts Open Policy On Discipline

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 4.—The New York Curb Exchange announced today that in the future it would give "full publicity" to any disciplinary action it took against any member firm, "regardless of whether it is felt that the public interest is involved."

This marks the first time, said the curb's board of governors, that a national security exchange has adopted such a policy.

The board voted unanimously for its adoption upon a recommendation of the three governors appointed by the board last November to represent the public interest. The formal statement said in part:

"A national securities exchange is a quasi-public institution. If it is to continue to act in that capacity, it must render a full account of its stewardship to the public at all times. . . .

"It must be a fundamental requirement that the members of a national securities exchange, to whom orders are entrusted by the public, should so conduct themselves that the highest degree of confidence may be placed in their integrity.

"Once this high standard has been established, there is no reason for not apprising the public as to the commission of a material offense by any member of the exchange. The public should be given full information so that it may decide for itself whether its interest has been affected, either directly or indirectly."

The public members of the curb are Dr. John T. Madden, economist; Victor F. Ridder, publisher, and Maj. Benjamin H. Namm, merchant.

Officials of the curb have been subpenaed to testify in Washington, February 17, before the Senate Securities and Exchange Commission regarding disciplinary action taken in the case of floor brokers who, last year, were charged with having split commissions with F. Chester Cuppia, broker, who later discontinued his membership.

Cotton Futures

New York, Feb. 4 (AP).—New-crop cotton futures gave way today to pressure inspired by belief Washington might license exports. Near months held up until the last few minutes of trade, when a prominent spot interest started selling. The final range was 3 to 7 points lower.

Persistent complaints in high quarters regarding the leak in the British blockade also was a factor. Russia, brokers said, could lead to imposition of licenses and hence the possibility of still further contraction in foreign markets for United States cotton.

Worth street textile agents said several million yards of print cloth and similar items sold at firm prices. The industrial and bag trade were prominent in the heavy fabric groups.

Exports Monday, 11,009 bales; season so far, 683,902. Port receipts, 7,705. Port stocks, 3,465,870.

The Post Radio Time Table

9:15 A. M., WJSV—Pure coincidence finds the American School of the Air on the subject of the Hudson's Bay Co., with Dr. Roy Chapman Andres as narrator, just when a Paul Muni film of that association is at the Columbia.

6:30 P. M., WINX—The National Christian Mission, broadcasting its local convention schedule over this station at 9:30 each morning, offers a round-table discussion of its aims.

7:30, WRC—Of all the specters that haunt Pennsylvania Avenue, Henry Clay's is one of the most vivid; his efforts on behalf of the Compromise of 1850 had far-reaching results. Cavalcade of America dramatizes part of the career of this colorful Kentuckian.

8, WRC—After a flying visit to benefit the Birthday Ball and to say hello to sparkling Lana Turner, Tony Martin is back at the Gold Coast mike, ready with "You're a Mystery to Me," "Breakfast for Two" and "Here in the Velvet Night."

8, WMAL—It's three girls versus two boys on tonight's Quiz Kids to determine who'll return for those $100 bonds next week.

9, WRC—Temporarily out of a job now that Al Jolson has closed his musical-comedy in New York, Jinx Falkenburg, that quaintly named glamor child, gleans advice from Eddie Cantor on how to behave in Hollywood. Bert Gordon, also of the late show, also has landed in sunny California.

10:30, WOL—"What America Expects of Its Youth in 1941" titles two addresses delivered by Admiral Harold Stark, chief of Naval operations, and Kenneth L. Roberts, author of "Oliver Wiswell" and "Northwest Passage," in celebration of the ninety-fifth Charter Day of Bucknell University.

Listen! with Glynn

You'll hear the voices of Katharine Hepburn, Greta Garbo, Bing Crosby, Zasu Pitts, Lew Lehr, Martha Raye, Mae West and Al Pearce—well, anyhow, a reasonable facsimile of them—on Fred Allen's show over WJSV at 9 tonight.

We sort of hate to break down and roll all those goodies into one, but the fact is that those voices are all being presented by one person. She's a 16-year-old high school sophomore from Washington Heights, N. Y., and she made such a hit on Major Bowes' Amateur Hour a couple of weeks ago as an impersonator that Fred has engaged her for a guest appearance on his hour of fun and fun.

Oh, yes, the girl's name is June Grady, and she says she owes her success to listening to the movies, records and the radio, which goes to prove what modern science will do for one—makes octuple personalities where only dual personalities grew before.

Tomorrow night's the night that WJSV's sports commentator, Arch McDonald, plays the name role when the Cross Roads Theater Group presents George Kelly's play, "The Show-Off" at Mount Vernon High School. The proceeds are to go to a fund for the renovation of historic Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria.

Arch hopes there's nothing indicative in the fact that he gets the hero parts in the darnedest-sounding plays. A couple of years ago he had the main role in "The Old Soak" when it was put on by the same group.

Typhus Case Spurs Drive Against Rats

A city-wide rat control campaign was launched yesterday by the District Health Department, which, earlier in the day disclosed a typhus case here.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland, in command of the program, which was recommended in a series of Post articles several months ago, said the disease was brought on by the bite of rat fleas. The case was reported from the Northeast section December 30 and since then the department in cooperation with the National Health Institute at Bethesda, Md., has been active in tracking down rats for laboratory examination.

The typhus patient, the first in 10 years, has recovered, according to Dr. Ruhland.

First step in his plans is to name a committee of health officials who will formulate a program to rid the city of rodents.

The committee, it is understood, will be headed by Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, who will have charge of general direction and epidemiology. Others include Dr. R. B. Ashworth, director of the Bureau of Food Inspection, who will direct rodent control in food establishments; Dr. Melvin P. Isaminger, director of the Bureau of Public Health Instruction, who will assemble and centralize information; Dr. Herman H. Topping, of the National Institute of Health, who will have charge of the rodent and virus investigation, and Claude F. Browning, sanitary engineer, who will have charge of rodent-control technique.

NLRB Shake-up Ordered to Speed Case Settlements

The National Labor Relations Board last night announced a shake-up of its administrative organization and procedure designed to speed up settlement of complaints lodged with the board.

The spokesman said the reorganization was particularly significant, in view of current labor difficulties in defense industries.

The order provides for a new administrative division to take charge of regional offices and preliminary development of cases, including decision on whether to issue complaints and hold hearings, and similar matters. The division will be headed by Garnet L. Patterson, formerly regional director in Chicago.

These duties heretofore were exercised by the board secretary, who also had charge of personnel. This office will be reduced to the status of an office manager. One of the major contentions has been that too much authority was centralized in the secretary.

The board said its shake-up would throw greater responsibility on trial examiners and review attorneys in connection with making recommendations to the board proper on decisions. It added that increasingly greater reliance will be placed on intermediate reports of trial examiners.

FBI Agents Seize Suspect In Betty Grable Extortion Case

Charge Ex-Convict Threatened Actress With Bodily Harm

The Department of Justice here last night disclosed that FBI agents have arrested a former convict who is accused of attempting to extort $8,500 from Betty Grable, film beauty. It was the second blackmail attempt against Betty in the last month.

An FBI official said the blackmail suspect, James David Thompson, a Philadelphia night club waiter, had threatened the actress with "bodily harm" unless she arranged to deliver the money to him. He will be arraigned on an extortion charge today in Philadelphia.

According to the FBI, he has served two terms in the penitentiary for forging a Government obligation and for violation of the postal law.

The agents said that Thompson had sent a letter on January 24 to Miss Grable, demanding the $8,500 on threat of harm, and that she mailed the sum to Philadelphia general delivery after inserting an advertisement in a Philadelphia paper.

About a month ago agents arrested James Willard Porter, 18, of Washington, Pa., who admitted having sent a letter to Miss Grable demanding $2,000 in which he threatened to "come out to Hollywood" and get the funds unless she sent them to him.

BETTY GRABLE

Nearing Warns Of Prosperity On War Economy

Warning that the United States is attempting to build prosperity on a war economy, Dr. Scott Nearing, economist and lecturer, last night declared that only those segments of our economic system enjoying Government orders would have any prosperity in 1941.

In the first in a series of lectures at 901 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, Dr. Nearing stated that New Deal efforts at recovery failed because production was ahead of consumption and because "the investment side of the income stream has been better protected than the wage side, resulting in the depletion of spending money.

Tracing the country's economic state from 1929 to the present, he said: "A point of chronic stagnation has been achieved, a point where prosperity cannot be reestablished through the old channels of business domination. The Government primed the pump, but no water came out. The only way out was a war economy."

Locomotive Blast Hurls Boiler 60 Feet, Injures 25

By the Associated Press

Denver, Feb. 4.—A huge passenger locomotive exploded in southwest industrial Denver today, catapulting its boiler and cab 60 feet through the air and injuring 25 persons, none seriously.

Weighing hundreds of tons, the boiler and cab arched backward over a switch engine and crushed an American Railway Express car. Two men in the switch engine suffered shock.

Steam and flame shooting from the exploding locomotive injured nearby motorists, broke windows in factory buildings and injured workmen on a flatcar.

The train, consisting of the passenger locomotive, switch engine, two express cars and three passenger cars carrying crew members, was moving slowly from the union station to the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad yards when the blast occurred. No passengers were aboard.

George F. Dodge, an executive of the railway, said that "it seems at this time that low water in the locomotive boiler was the cause of the explosion."

"The whole engine seemed to come apart," Ehalt said. "The next thing I knew I was crawling out the left door."

Foundry Strike Truce Called As Company Agrees to Confer

By the Associated Press

A 32-hour strike of C. I. O. members in the bar mill and foundry of the National Tube Co.'s plant at Ellwood City, Pa., was halted, at least temporarily, yesterday when the company agreed to confer with union leaders about demands for a wage adjustment.

Approximately 200 workers were involved, but the interruption threatened to affect more of the 4,000 employes if it had continued. The tube company is a subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation and is engaged in turning out numerous defense orders.

Drivers for seven trucking firms at Dayton, Ohio, went back to work while officials of 26 others sought again to agree with union representatives to end a 4-day-old strike which has halted all deliveries except perishables and emergency goods in the Dayton area.

A strike involving approximately 1,300 Michigan City, Ind., workers also was settled while Federal negatiators continued efforts to adjust differences which are keeping two large defense plants idle in Chicago and Milwaukee.

The Michigan City strikers—employes of the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Co.—voted to return to work under a temporary agreement.

Conciliators were hopeful of breaking the Chicago deadlock, involving some 6,500 tractor workers of the International Harvester Co. After a conference with representatives of strikers and employer they said additional meetings would be necessary.

In Milwaukee, 7,000 employes of the Allis-Chalmers Co. were still out. The plant closed down two weeks ago while working on $40,000,000 of defense orders.
